ASSUMPTION THAT STATE MUST SUPPORT THE PEOPLE A MENACE

Must Follow the Example of Courageous Independence Set by the Pilgrim Fathers and Avoid Centralization at Home and Super-State of the World, Says President Harding.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Pilgrim Amphitheater, Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 1.—America stands today with "new hope" at the door of a new era which promises to bring the nation and the world to "the state which God must have meant for those created in His own image." President Harding declared here today in an address at the Pilgrim tercentenary celebration.

"Our faith is firmer that war's cause may be minimized and overburdening armament may be largely diminished, and without surrender of the nationality which has inspired, or the good conscience which has defended," the president declared.

"The international prospect is more than promising and the distress and depression at home are symptomatic of early recovery," the president continued. "Solvent financially, sound economically—these United States will carry on."

The president called upon the nation to follow the example of courageous independence set by the Pilgrim fathers. "We must guard against the supreme centralization of power at home," he declared, "and the super-state for the world. More, we must combat the menace in the growing assumption that the state is the outstanding danger of today is the tendency to turn to Washington for the things which are the tasks or the duties of the forty-eight commonwealths. Having founded the nation as the central power of preservation and defense, let us preserve it so."

The president's address followed:

"Governor Cox and fellow Americans:

"Though they seem comparatively measureless to us, three centuries are little more than a moment in the chronicle of human history. Christianity is now rounding out its twentieth century and there is no comprehensible measure to the human ferment which went before. Our actual national life is less than half the period of marvellous new world development, the tercentenary of which beginning we celebrate, but in that little while the achievement is the most significant of all the centuries. It is not too much to say that the three centuries which have passed since men of our race came here to found a new state have been the most momentous and the most pregnant in all the progress of human kind."

"They were more swiftly moving and seemingly more vital than the much longer periods of Egyptian, Greek or Roman civilizations, with which we are familiar and it is not impossible that the commanding potency of progress and material possessions may turn the significant beginning at Plymouth into surpassing influence in the making of human history."

To this and the Virginia shore were transplanted the seeds of representative democracy, the new ideals of nationality through association and representation and there has developed seemingly, the most dependable form of popular government ever witnessed in the world. Perhaps this larger achievement was not intended by the heroes of colonization. They were seeking freedom and found nationality essential to its preservation. Destiny pointed the way and the hand of divinity traced the course of God-ordained human advancement. Here came the sturdy English middle class of yeomanry, burghers and squires, who clung to their ideals of representative government. At home they might have been crushed under the burdens which reaction was seeking to impose.

"Here they could have free play and begin anew and fashion the temple of freedom in a new land and they began what we call republican institutions. These institutions are the agencies of highest freedom which embody at once the centralized authority strong enough to hold together a great community and those essentials of democracy which insure dominance to the intelligent will of a free people."

"Whether we reflect upon the restraints upon freedom which the broader liberty under the law of today, here began the reign of dependable public opinion, which unfailingly in the law of highest civilization. One may not say whether the Puritan world, at home, have been able to work out such a system, if there had been no American colonies and the colonial influence to react upon the mother country. Doubtless the English revolution which came after the settlement at Plymouth, would have come even had there been no settlement here, no Massachusetts Bay colony, no Virginia plantation. But it is easy to believe that in the home struggle after the restoration, the strengthened parliamentary institutions and the restrictions on royal prerogative were helped by the influence of colonial democracy."

"It is a difficult task to strike out and measure the factors in political and social progress. The germ of progress is doubtless universal, but requires favorable conditions for its development. Conditions were favorable in the new world and the Plymouth colony was destined to live in the accompanying story of three centuries of effort, eager pursuit of human justice."

To one ever will dispute the large part New England played in the reading of new standards of freedom. The world chorus today rejoicing in maintained democracy, attuned its chord to the notes first sounded here. This development of liberty, this great conception of freedom, took ever firmer hold, until it was held and voiced unceasingly by those who bore aloft its banners here. And there was significant reflex in the motherland. No Englishman will do his country full justice or will quite understand its human story, who does not seek out and study the effects of this sympathy and inter-action between the seasoned, age-old liberalism of the English countryside and the new, eager, outreaching aspiration of those who were planting the seed in a fresh soil and guarding its early development. No American can fully appraise his country's contribution to mankind's advance if he overlooks these things which were truly fundamental in creating two towers of national strength for freedom, where there might have been but one. That manifest destiny whose directing hand we discern when we survey the long processes of history, would doubtless have brought at last the happy state of both political and religious freedom. But without co-operation of forces, reaction of influences between the old England and the New, we may well doubt whether the light of the new day would have broken through to shine upon the better fortunes of an emancipated race without a struggle longer, by generations, perhaps by centuries, than that which history records.

"Hand of man alone did not build what was founded here; it was but the visible sign, the human symbol, of a purpose, which we may not understand, but for whose beneficence all men must give tribute of praise and voice undying gratitude. We may speculate and conjecture, we may seek to trace laws of human relationship by which to account for results, as here have been wrought; but at last we will have to recognize that they are not for us to explain."

"Even Cromwell in his great leadership, failed to understand. He spoke contemptuously of those whom he accused of running away from the struggle at home."

"There has never lived a generation of men possessing such wealth of historic materials, such capacity for candid analysis, such broad experience to guide them in right determination, as the generation to which we belong. Likewise there has been none which confronted more complex and difficult problems. Therefore, I like to commend study of the history which began here at Plymouth, in its relations to the sweep of modern affairs. It teaches us that sometimes schism may lead to true solidarity; that division may mean multiplication."

"The community of free people of our race, whether in Europe or America, in Africa or Australia, under the Northern or the Southern skies—whether held together by political ties or by the yet more potent bonds of common traditions, institutions, language and blood—this community, spread now to all quarters of the world, was begun when Jamestown and Plymouth were founded."

"It is work is not finished; but pray God, it has come triumphantly through its determining ordeal. It comes forth from that test, nerve and heartened for further tasks, confident, assured, reliant. None questions either its place or its right of leadership; few doubt its destiny to establish, under that divine guidance which it has ever recognized, the splendid structure of human brotherhood in peace and understanding."

"The perspective of history are not safely to be judged save from the loftiest peaks of human experience."

The Sahler Chautauqua.
The fourth week of the Dr. C. O. Sahler Chautauqua opened last night with an excellent talk by Mrs. May Cornell Stoiber, who is at the head of the New Thought Temple in Cincinnati. Mrs. Stoiber will be the lecturer and teacher for the week.

This evening the subject will be "The Application of the Golden Rule in Cincinnati." Lectures at 8 p. m. and classes daily at 11 a. m.

On Wednesday night there will be an entertainment.

Gorky's Reply Given.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Riga, Aug. 1.—Maxim Gorky's reply to Herbert Hoover's communication to Soviet Russia regarding conditions of American relief measures was handed to American Commissioner Young today. Gorky has been put in charge of the Russian relief committee.

Editha's Discharge.
Charles Editha of Tremper avenue was arrested Sunday by Officers Rattazzi and Barker on a charge of disorderly conduct. This morning Special City Judge Maclellan discharged him.

Police On Vacation.
Sergeant Phinney and Officers Simpson and Dempsey are enjoying their annual two weeks' vacation. Officers Jackson, Hooper and Sander resumed their duties on Sunday.

LABOR ELECTION IS SET ASIDE

Railway Labor Board Insists Pennsylvania Railroad Employees May Vote for Union Representatives if They So Desire.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, Aug. 1.—The issue of the "open shop" as it affects employees of the Pennsylvania railroad, was brought sharply to the front today by the action of the U. S. Railway Labor Board in ordering new elections of representatives of employees of the road and prescribing the manner of voting.

The order sets aside elections already held and overrules the contention of officials of the railway that their employees' representatives shall be chosen without regard for union affiliations. Conferences to be held before August 12 will determine the method of holding the new elections.

Officials of the Pennsylvania railroad frankly stated at recent hearings of the labor board that they would deal with their employees according to their own plans, virtually denying the right of the board to interfere. This attitude, in the decision issued by the board, is called "quibbling" and "almost treasonable." The board expressed impatience with "quibbling" over technicalities and declared that "at a time when the nation is slowly and painfully progressing through the condition of industrial depression, unemployment and unrest is almost treasonable for any employer or employee stubbornly to haggle over unessentials at the risk of social chaos."

The Pennsylvania, in ostensible compliance with an order of the board for conferences with its employees on new rules, had held a general election. Votes were cast for individuals only and the names of the various labor organizations among the Pennsylvania employees, did not appear on the ballot. Rules negotiated with representatives so elected have been put into effect.

The labor board sets aside this election and these rules and orders a new election at which the employees may vote for representatives of the labor organizations if they desire. Representatives chosen at the new election are to be recognized by the road on new conferences on rules.

No statement as to their attitude toward the newest order of the board has come from Pennsylvania officials.

'COLD WAVE' GIVES GREAT RELIEF

The break in the long spell of hot weather under which Kingston has been sweltering occurred about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, following severe thunder storms in various parts of the county. The change in temperature has been general throughout the east.

Sunday afternoon's storm was severe in many sections. Kingston received a deluge for a few minutes but there was not much lightning. In the vicinity of Lake Katrine, however, there was a severe electrical storm, during which a bolt of lightning struck the boarding house of John Cook, about half a mile north of Marz's Hotel on the Saugerties road. Two boarders seated on the front piazza were severely shocked, and several shingles and a portion of the cornice at one end of the house were torn loose. Lightning also struck a large chestnut tree at "Camp Buster" at Lake Katrine, owned by Deval Howard, manager of the McBride drug store on Broadway. In Kingston a bolt struck the residence of Emory Happy at No. 12 Delta Place and loosened several boards.

Mrs. David Kiefer of Lake Katrine is recovering from the effect of a bolt of lightning which struck one corner of her piazza during the storm last Thursday afternoon. After closing the windows of her house in view of the approaching storm, she sat on the piazza to get cooled when the lightning struck the corner of the piazza and she was thrown to the lawn, several feet away.

The peak of the "cold wave" was reached at 5:15 this morning, when the thermometer fell in a few minutes from 65 to 63 degrees.

QUOTATIONS AT PUBLIC MARKET

Kingston's public market on Field Court was well attended this morning and all goods were sold by 4 o'clock, when the market closed for the day. The market has now been running for two weeks and interest in it has been growing daily and there has been no trouble in getting all goods brought to the market. The number of both producers and purchasers has also been increasing and the market is rapidly growing in popularity.

The wholesale quotations today were:

Peaches—$2 to $2.50 a basket.
Plums—$1 to $1.25 a basket.
Apples—$1 to $1.50 a basket.
Cantaloupes—$2 to $3 a crate.
Yellow Onions—$1.75 to $2 per hamper.
Cauliflower—$1 to $1.15 per dozen bunches.
Carrots—$20 per dozen bunches.
Beets—$10 per dozen bunches.
Potatoes—$1.75 to $1.90 a bushel.
Tomatoes—$1 to $1.25 a bushel.
Cabbage—$7 to $8 a 100 heads.
Peppers—$1 to $1.25 a 100.
Cucumbers—$10 to $1 a 100.

PROSPERITY HITS PITTSBURGH DIST.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 1.—Prosperity is returning to the great Pittsburgh and Youngstown industrial districts. There is a noticeable revival in business in most lines.

Within the last ten days several thousand men have gone back to work, largely in the Allied steel industries, several thousand more resumed work today and indications are that thousands more will be given employment within the next two weeks.

Invariably the men who are going back to mills and mines are doing so at reduced wages, generally 10 to 15 percent below what they formerly received, and in some instances at reductions of 20 per cent, but the hysteria over wage cuts and open shop has died out. Men want work and they are glad to accept steady employment even at reduced wages.

Steel plants and steel working industries are booking large orders and the whole atmosphere is more optimistic and cheerful.

The independent steel mills have reduced wages to almost pre-war scales. United States Steel is expected to get down to the independent basis shortly.

Price cuts are expected in steel products within a week or ten days. When buyers who have been holding back realized there will be no more cutting, a flood of big orders is anticipated and every plant will be going full tilt within sixty days, according to views of some of the biggest steel men.

Mahoning Valley plants report buying is better. Some plants are working on large orders from automobile plants.

Railroads are expected to come into the market for heavy tonnage of steel in September.

The Sharon Steel Hoop Company is preparing to blow in its Lowellville, Ohio, blast furnace.

The Spang-Chaffant Company of Pittsburgh last week booked an order for 150 miles of 18 inch pipe. This will keep one mill in full operation for four months. The other mill resumed last week.

The Shenango plant of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company at Newcastle started up ten mills last week. The company now has 29 hot mills going.

At Monessen, Pa., two steel plants resumed today and 1,900 men went back to work.

In southwestern Pennsylvania, a great many men employed in coke making will likely return to work shortly.

Severn P. Kell, president of the Sharon Steel Hoop Company, is optimistic over the outlook and a betterment of business conditions in a very short time is certain, he says.

ANTHRACITE COAL INDUSTRY BOOMS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 1.—The anthracite coal industry has been booming throughout the spring and summer and a full time schedule is ahead for the fall and winter. The anthracite belt has been one of few prosperous spots in the country and with mills and factories preparing for reopening, a rejuvenation is predicted.

Some of the biggest industrial firms were forced to curtail and shut down in order to get back to "normalcy," but are to re-employ the men in large numbers.

Building trades are hampered by war time prices, but when they are lowered the anthracite belt will have returned to conditions that prevailed before the war. There is the feeling that such prosperity is almost at hand.

Business men and workmen are optimistic. Banks have been doing a big business, merchants have bought heavily and have had a good summer.

DELAYED SHIPS REACH NEW YORK

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—Three liners, bringing hundreds of immigrants from Italy, Greece and Ireland, officially "arrived" here today. They crossed the three mile limit almost on the stroke of midnight, after having delayed their arrival in American waters for several days to evade the new immigration restriction law.

The Mexalli Hellas, the Greek steamer, which, with 139 American passengers, has been riding the waters off Fire Island since last week, came in first, landing a family of Americans, but a party of boarders of Greeks, who might have had to return to the old country had the Mexalli "arrived" during July. The Greek, carrying immigrants, arrived from Greece today and is believed to have delayed enroute to avoid difficulties with the new law.

An American Cardinal.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Rome, Aug. 1.—A consistory will be held at the Vatican in October when five cardinals probably will be created, including one American, it was learned in Vatican circles today.

Benjamin Bull of No. 19 West Union street is removing today to Schenectady, where he will engage in the clothing business.

GERMAN RED CROSS AIDING RUSSIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Berlin, August 1.—The German Red Cross has heeded Russia's cry for help. Announcement was made today that a ship is being loaded with medical supplies with which to fight the Russian cholera plague. It will be sent to Petrograd. A number of German doctors are going with the medicines to cooperate with the Russian Red Cross.

A gloomy and desolate picture of life in Russia is painted in advices received by the Berliner Tageblatt through "underground channels" from Petrograd. The Petrograd correspondent of the German newspaper says:

"The discipline of the workers has broken down, but there is practically no work because there is no raw materials, no iron, no coal, no nails for building and no tools. In Petrograd the ration of bread is one pound daily. The people are supposed to get a quarter of a pound of sugar monthly and sometimes they get a pound of dried fish. Speculators are profiteering in the little stocks of butter, coffee, lard, shoes, clothing and other necessities that are on hand."

"Seventy-five per cent of the factories are idle. The workmen are fleeing from the country in search of food."

"There are about 1,000,000 inhabitants in Saratov and Samara that are in desperate need. They require approximately 250,000 tons of grain at once for nourishment. The crops in the Saratov and Samara districts were failures."

"A farmer in the Volk district of Saratov writing to a friend in Petrograd said: 'It's like a desolate district of the dead here. The people are living amidst squalor, filth and disease. Unless our village gets help, the 2,500 inhabitants will die.'"

"Another farmer living in the Taschekli district of Samara wrote: 'Our people are eating grass and weeds, field rats and fodder or anything else that has any nourishment. They are so weak that they fall over one another. In the district of Saransk the people are mere shadows of human beings. If one secures a handful of grain he mixes it with tree bark, ground up acorns and moss and a little chaff.'"

"In the Volga district the cholera fatalities reach 90 per cent."

Strike Ends in Rochester.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 1.—The building trades strike which has affected close to 3,000 workers in the building trades, came to an end here today, both sides having agreed to arbitrate. The strike has been in progress since April 1, when the union workers quit, following their refusal to grant the contractors' demand for a 25 per cent wage reduction.

K. OF C. TO FIGHT WHITE PLAGUE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 1.—A comprehensive and sustained attack by 800,000 men and their families on the White Plague was launched today at the International Convention of the Knights of Columbus.

Under the chairmanship of Dr. E. W. Buckley of St. Paul, supreme physician of the Knights of Columbus, the Knights throughout the United States and Canada will initiate and maintain a campaign against tuberculosis to be supported by local aid and maintenance of beds in sanitariums and the rendering of material aid to consumptives.

"After an exhaustive research and consultation with noted experts on tuberculosis," Dr. Buckley reported, "the Knights of Columbus anti-tuberculosis committee has concluded that concentrated localized activity is the most effective weapon against the spread of tuberculosis."

Knights of Columbus educators from all parts of the country met today to formulate final plans for the correspondence school system. The Knights, it was announced, plan the largest correspondence school in the United States to augment their free night school system numbering 122 units and serving 150 former service men and women.

Approximately 20,000 delegates are here today to attend the convention. Secretary of Commerce Hoover today wired the convention congratulating the Knights on their educational work in promoting foreign trade service study among ex-service men.

Other messages were received from Secretary of the Navy Denby and James Paderewski, former Premier of Poland, who is at Paso Robles, California.

Upheaval in Guatemala.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Mexico City, Aug. 1.—An uprising against the Guatemalan government has broken out at Quetzaltenango. The Guatemalan legation was advised today.

One Speeder Arrested.
David Jacobson of White Plains was arrested Sunday afternoon by Officer Power on a charge of driving 20 miles an hour. He gave bail for his appearance later.

HOOVER TAKES STEPS TO RELIEVE RUSSIAN FAMINE SUFFERERS

Delivery of American Prisoners Out of Russia Must Precede Actual Relief Work—Director of American Relief Administration to Proceed At Once to Riga.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, August 1.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover today cabled Walter L. Brown, director for Europe of the American Relief Administration to proceed at once to Riga to open negotiations for the relief of the Russian famine situation. Hoover's instructions to Brown, who is now in London, stipulated that the Americans hold prisoner in Russia must be delivered at Riga before discussions were opened.

Secretary Hoover's action followed receipt of the reply of Maxim Gorky to Hoover's offer of American relief to starving Russia on condition that the Americans detained by the Soviet authorities would be released immediately.

The text of the reply, as made public today, shows that the Russians are willing to accept all the conditions laid down in Secretary Hoover's message.

The text of the cablegram sent to Mr. Brown follows:

"As to cable forwarded through you from Mr. Gorky of July 25 would be glad if you would proceed at once to Riga. It is of course assumed that the prisoners will have been delivered out of Russia as demanded by the state department before you open discussions. You will recognize that such a course is the most primary evidence of willingness to assure life and liberty of our staff. You will please advise Messrs. Gorky and Kamenev."

The message received by Hoover does not differ substantially from the press reports from Riga of the terms of the reply. It is therefore assumed that the communication is a complete acceptance of the conditions laid down by Hoover, and subsequently reiterated by Secretary of State Hughes in a communication to the Soviet authorities.

The release of American prisoners is not expected to have any great effect upon commercial relations between the United States and Russia. Reports to this government, officials stated, indicate that there is no economic basis for the resumption of trade on a considerable scale. The gold supply of Russia is practically exhausted. It is contended and there is apparently no production for export. The fact that millions of Russians are facing starvation, officials said, is proof that for the present there can be no substantial surplus of commodities in Russia.

At the navy department it was considered unlikely that American war vessels would be sent to bring home Americans who may be released from prison or detention in Soviet Russia. Officials pointed out that there are plenty of commercial vessels upon which the Americans may take passage for the United States, and the American consular authorities in Baltic states will probably be authorized to furnish funds for those among the released Americans who are not able to pay their own way.

Secretary Hoover said that American relief will begin to be available for needy Russians within two weeks. Large supplies are already at Danzig, he declared, which can be moved quickly to the more accessible portions of western Russia.

The American relief organization can take care of 1,000,000 Russian children and the probable expense involved will run from $1,000,000 to $1,250,000 a month, Hoover said. It is not possible now, he intimated, to state how long the relief work must continue. Even after supplies begin moving from Danzig, into parts of Russia where famine appears to be worse, Hoover pointed out, several weeks must elapse before the relief machinery can be made most efficient. Hoover said that the relief administration in addition to furnishing food and other supplies will be prepared to extend medical assistance.

REVOLUTION ADDS MORE CHOLERA TERROR IN RUSSIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Paris, Aug. 1.—A revolutionary uprising has added fresh terrors to the terrible famine and plague situation in Russia, but the government troops are crushing the rebels, said a Reval dispatch to L'Information today.

Four million starving, plague-stricken peasants are reported to be moving towards Moscow from the cholera and famine districts.

The cholera is claiming 95 per cent of the residents of some districts.

The public service bureau has been notified by the workers in the Volga district that all the factories will be turned back to their former owners under guarantees, the Reval dispatch added.

The Petrograd tramways are to be turned back to their Belgian owners.

An Erroneous Report.
Sunday the New York newspapers carried a despatch from Los Angeles, California to the effect that Mrs. Charles Slauson, 59 years old, a former resident of New York, had killed herself by shooting, which caused some anxiety in Kingston as it was thought the woman mentioned was the sister of Attorney Amos Van Etten, which proved to be untrue. Later in the day on Sunday Mr. Van Etten, who had seen the dispatch, got in communication with his sister.

Critics in Lisbon.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Aug. 1.—The Portuguese legation anxiously waited word from Lisbon today regarding the new political crisis in the Portuguese capital. According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from the Spanish-Portuguese frontier the Lisbonarrison was suddenly called out to picket the streets while cannon were planned to sweep the public squares. The cabinet met to discuss the situation.

Lightning Shocks Mothers.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—It takes a lot to shock a mother at the beach these days, but when one place bathing suits failed, lightning succeeded. Thirty members of the New York Athletic Club were recovering today from injuries sustained when they were felled in a heap on a bathing pavilion floor in which they were sheltering from a violent electrical storm Sunday.

Remembering The Others.
An automobile party from the Catskills arrived themselves Sunday while waiting at the White Plains ferry dock for the boat by throwing sticks and dimes into the creek for a lot of boys to dive for. The youngsters proved to be adept divers as they retrieved the dimes almost every time. One boy had his mouth so full of dimes and ten just pieces he couldn't talk.

White Child With Negroes.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—The mystery of a pretty little white child, three years old, found, bruised and emaciated sleeping in a dark cellar between two negroes, during a drug raid, remained unsolved today. The negroes claim that they have had the child for three years, but the baby declares it remembers its "white mama."

LIVELY LIVED UP TO HIS NAME

Killed Hatfield and Chambers, West Virginia Gunmen, Who Were Up for Trial by Beating Them on the Draw.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Welch, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Sld Hatfield and Ed. Chambers, two of the principal defendants in the great murder trial at Williamson, W. Va., several months ago, for the battle of Matewan, a year ago, were both shot and killed just before noon here today by P. E. Lively.

The two men were here to face trial for the alleged shooting up of the town of Matewan, W. Va. An argument ensued and Hatfield attempted to shoot Lively but the latter was too quick on the draw and beat Hatfield to it.

Passengers Seal Tactics.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—Fashionable Fifth avenue was aroused from aristocratic couches at an early hour today to peep from behind blinds at a noisy pursuit of two auto bandits, who were chased after they had held up their own tax driver and taken away his money and his job. The bandits, who told the chauffeur they were expert men who had received a "dirty deal," escaped. Two detectives commanded a car and went in pursuit, firing as they whirled through the usually quiet and always refined neighborhood, but failed to stop the stolen auto.

ASSUMPTION THAT STATE MUST SUPPORT THE PEOPLE A MENACE

Must Follow the Example of Courageous Independence Set by the Pilgrim Fathers and Avoid Centralization at Home and Super-State of the World, Says President Harding.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Pilgrim Amphitheater, Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 1.—America stands today with "new hope" at the door of a new era which promises to bring the nation and the world to "the state which God must have meant for those created in His own image," President Harding declared here today in an address at the Pilgrim centenary celebration.

"Our faith is firmer that war's cause may be minimized and overburdening armament may be largely diminished, and without surrender of the nationality which has inspired, or the good conscience which has defended," the president declared.

"The international prospect is more than promising and the distress and depression at home are symptomatic of early recovery," the president continued. "Solvent financially, sound economically—these United States will carry on."

The president called upon the nation to follow the example of courageous independence set by the Pilgrim fathers. "We must guard against the supreme centralization of power at home," he declared, and "the super-state for the world. More, we must combat the menace in the growing assumption that the state must support the people. The one outstanding danger of today is the tendency to turn to Washington for the things which are the tasks or the duties of the forty-eight commonwealths. Having wrought the nation as the central power of preservation and defense, let us preserve it so."

The president's address follows:

"Governor Cox and fellow Americans:

"Though they seem comparatively measureless to us, three centuries are little more than a moment in the chronicle of human history. Christianity is now rounding out its twentieth century, and there is no comprehensible measure to the human ferment which went before. Our actual national life is less than half the period of marvellous new world development, the tercentenary of which beginning we celebrate, but in that little while the achievement is the most significant of all the centuries. It is not too much to say that the three centuries which have passed since men of our race came here to found a new state have been the most momentous and the most pregnant in all the progress of human kind."

"They were more swiftly moving and seemingly more vital than the longer periods of Egyptian, Greek or Roman civilization, with which we are familiar and it is not impossible that the commanding potency of progress and material possessions may turn the significant beginning at Plymouth into surpassing influence in the making of human history."

"This and the Virginia shore were transplanted the seeds of representative democracy, the new ideals of nationality through association and representation and there has developed seemingly, the most dependable form of popular government ever witnessed in the world. Perhaps this larger achievement was not intended by the heroes of colonization. They were seeking freedom and found nationality essential to its preservation. Destiny pointed the way and the hand of divinity traced the course of God-intended human advancement. Here came the sturdy English middle class of yeomanry, burghers and squires, who clung to the ideals of representative government. At home they might have been crushed under the burdens which reaction was seeking to impose."

"Here they could have free play and begin anew and fashion the temple of freedom in a new land and they began what we call republican institutions. These institutions are the agencies of highest freedom which embody at once the centralized authority strong enough to hold together a great community and those essentials of democracy which insure dominance to the intelligent will of a free people."

"Whether we reflect upon the restraints upon freedom which the broader liberty under the law of today, here began the reign of dependable public opinion, which unfailingly is the law of highest civilization. One may not say whether the Puritans would, at home, have been able to work out such a system if there had been no American colonies and the colonial influences to react upon the mother country. Doubtless the English revolution which came soon after the settlement at Plymouth, would have come even had there been no settlement here, no Massachusetts bay colony, no Virginia plantation. But it is easy to believe that in the long struggle after the restoration the fruits of the revolution, the strengthened parliamentary institutions and the restrictions on royal prerogative were helped by the influences of colonial democracy."

"It is a difficult task to single out and measure the factors in political and social progress. The germ of progress is doubtless universal, but requires favorable conditions for its development. Conditions were favorable in the new world and the Plymouth colony was destined to begin the surpassing story of three centuries of ardent, eager pursuit of human justice."

"No one ever will dispute the large part New England played in the reading of new standards of freedom. The world chorus today rejoicing in maintained democracy, attuned its chord to the notes first sounded here. This development of liberty, this great conception of freedom, took ever firmer hold until it was held and voiced unceasingly by those who bore aloft its banners here. And there was significant reflex in the motherland. No Englishman will do his country full justice or will quite understand its human story, who does not seek out and study the effects of this sympathy and inter-action between the seasoned, age-old liberalism of the English countryside and the new, eager, outreaching aspiration of those who were planting the seed in a fresh soil and guarding its early development. No American can fully appraise his country's contribution to mankind's advance if he overlooks these things which were truly fundamental in creating two towers of national strength for freedom, where there might have been but one. That manifest destiny which our directing hand we deprecate when we survey the long processes of history, would doubtless have brought at last the happy state of both political and religious freedom. But without co-operation of forces, the old England and the New, we may well doubt whether the light of the new day would have broken through to shine upon the better fortunes of an emancipated race without a struggle longer, by generations, perhaps by centuries, than that which history records."

"The hand of man alone did not build what was founded here; it was but the visible sign, the human symbol, of a purpose, which we may not understand, but for whose beneficence all men must give tribute of praise and voice undying gratitude. We may speculate and conjecture, but we may seek to trace the laws of human relationship by which to account for such results as here have been wrought; but at last we will have to recognize that they are not for us to explain."

"Even Cromwell in his great leadership, failed to understand. He spoke contemptuously of those whom he accused of running away from the struggle at home."

"There have never lived a generation of men possessing such wealth of historic materials, such capacity for candid analysis, such broad experience to guide them in right determination, as the generation to which we belong. Likewise there has been none which confronted more complex and difficult problems. Therefore, I like to commend study of the history which began here at Plymouth, in its relations to the sweep of modern affairs. It teaches us that sometimes schism may lead to true solidarity; that division may mean multiplication."

"The community of free people of our race, whether in Europe or America, in Africa or Australia, in the Northern or the Southern skies—whether held together by political ties or by the yet more potent bonds of common traditions, institutions, language and blood—this community, spread now to all quarters of the world, was begun when Jamestown and Plymouth were founded."

"It's work is not finished; but pray God, it has come triumphantly through its determining ordeal. It comes forth from that test, nerve and heartened for further tasks, confident, assured, reliant. None questions either its place or its right of leadership; few doubt its destiny to establish, under that divine guidance which has ever recognized the splendid structure of human brotherhood in peace and understanding."

"The perspectives of history are not safely to be judged save from the loftiest peaks of human experience."

The Sahler Chautauqua.

The fourth week of the Dr. C. O. Sahler Chautauqua opened last night with an excellent talk by Mrs. May Cornell Stoiber, who is at the head of the New Thought Temple in Cincinnati. Mrs. Stoiber will be the lecturer and teacher for the week. This evening the subject will be "The Application of the Golden Rule in Cincinnati." Lectures at 8 p. m. and classes daily at 11 a. m.

On Wednesday night there will be an entertainment.

LABOR ELECTION IS SET ASIDE

Railway Labor Board Insists Pennsylvania Railroad Employees May Vote for Union Representatives if They So Desire.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, Aug. 1.—The issue of the "open shop" as it affects employees of the Pennsylvania railroad, was brought sharply to the front today by the action of the U. S. Railway Labor Board in ordering new elections of representatives of employees of the road and prescribing the manner of voting.

The order sets aside elections already held and overrules the contention of officials of the railway that their employees' representatives shall be chosen without regard for union affiliations. Conferences to be held before August 12 will determine the method of holding the new elections. Officials of the Pennsylvania railroad frankly stated at recent hearings of the labor board that they would deal with their employees according to their own plans, virtually denying the right of the board to interfere. This attitude, in the decision issued by the board, is called "quibbling" and "almost treasonable."

The board expressed impatience with "quibbling" over technicalities and declared that "at a time when the nation is slowly and painfully progressing through the condition of industrial depression, unemployment and unrest is almost treasonable for any employer or employee stubbornly to haggle over essentials at the risk of social chaos."

The Pennsylvania, in ostensible compliance with an order of the board for conferences with its employees on new rules, had held a general election. Votes were cast for individuals only and the names of the various labor organizations among the Pennsylvania employees, did not appear on the ballot. Rules negotiated with representatives so elected have been put into effect.

The labor board sets aside this election and orders a new election at which the employees may vote for representatives of the labor organizations if they desire. Representatives chosen at the new election are to be recognized by the road on new conferences on rules.

No statement as to their attitude toward the newest order of the board has come from Pennsylvania officials.

'COLD WAVE' GIVES GREAT RELIEF

The break in the long spell of hot weather under which Kingston has been sweltering occurred about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, following severe thunder storms in various parts of the county. The change in temperature has been general throughout the east.

Sunday afternoon's storm was severe in many sections. Kingston received a deluge for a few minutes but there was not much lightning. In the vicinity of Lake Katrine, however, there was a severe electrical storm, during which a bolt of lightning struck the boarding house of John Cook, about half a mile north of Mar's Hotel on the Saugerties road. Two boarders seated on the front piazza were severely shocked, and several shingles and a portion of the cornice at one end of the house were torn loose. Lightning also struck a large chestnut tree at "Camp Buster" at Lake Katrine, owned by Devall Howard, manager of the McBride drug store on Broadway. In Kingston a bolt struck the residence of Emory Happy at No. 12 Delta Place and loosened several boards.

Mrs. David Kiefer of Lake Katrine is recovering from the effect of a bolt of lightning which struck one corner of her piazza during the storm last Thursday afternoon. After closing the windows of her house in view of the approaching storm, she sat on the piazza to get cooled when the lightning struck the corner of the piazza and she was thrown to the lawn, several feet away.

The peak of the "cold wave" was reached at 8:15 this morning, when the thermometer fell in a few minutes from 65 to 63 degrees.

QUOTATIONS AT PUBLIC MARKET

Kingston's public market on Field Court was well attended this morning and all goods were sold by 8 o'clock, when the market closed for the day. The market has now been running for two weeks and interest in it has been growing daily and there has been no trouble in selling all goods brought to the market. The number of both producers and purchasers has also been increasing, and the market is rapidly growing in popularity.

The wholesale quotations today were:

Peaches—75c to $1.50 a basket.
Plums—75c to $1.25 a basket.
Apples—50 to 60c a basket.
Cantaloupe—$2 to $4 a crate.
Yellow Onions—$1.75 to $2 per hamper.
Celery—$1 to $1.15 per dozen bunches.
Carrots—35c per dozen bunches.
Beets—40c per dozen bunches.
Potatoes—$1.75 to $1.80 a bushel.
Tomatoes—$1 to $1.25 a basket.
Cabbage—$7 to $8 a 100 heads.
Peppers—$1 to $1.25 a 100.
Cucumbers—50c to $1 a 100.

PROSPERITY HITS PITTSBURGH DIST.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 1.—Prosperity is returning to the great Pittsburgh and Youngstown industrial districts. There is a noticeable revival in business in most lines.

Within the last ten days several thousand men have gone back to work, largely in the Allied steel industries, several thousand more resumed work today and indications are that thousands more will be given employment within the next two weeks.

Invariably the men who are going back to mills and mines are doing so at reduced wages, generally 10 to 15 percent below what they formerly received, and in some instances at reductions of 20 per cent, but the hysteria over wage cuts and open shop has died out. Men want work and they are glad to accept steady employment even at reduced wages.

Steel plants and steel working industries are booking large orders and the whole atmosphere is more optimistic and cheerful.

The independent steel mills have reduced wages to almost pre-war scales. United States Steel is expected to get down to the independent basis shortly.

Price cuts are expected in steel products within a week or ten days. When buyers who have been holding back realized there will be no more cutting, a flood of big orders is anticipated and every plant will be going full tilt within sixty days, according to views of some of the biggest steel men.

Monroeville Valley plants report buying is better. Some plants are working on large orders from automobile plants.

Railroads are expected to come into the market for heavy tonnage of steel in September.

The Sharon Steel Hoop Company is preparing to blow in its Lowellville, Ohio, blast furnace.

The Spang-Chaffant Company of Pittsburgh last week booked an order for 150 miles of 18 inch pipe. This will keep one mill in full operation for four months. The other mill resumed last week.

The Shenango plant of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company at Newcast started up ten mills last week. The company now has 29 hot mills going.

At Monessen, Pa., two steel plants resumed today and 1,900 men went back to work.

In Southwestern Pennsylvania, a great many men employed in coke making will likely return to work shortly.

Severn P. Kell, president of the Sharon Steel Hoop Company, is optimistic over the outlook and a betterment of business conditions in a very short time is certain, he says.

ANTHRACITE COAL INDUSTRY BOOMS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 1.—The anthracite coal industry has been booming throughout the spring and summer and a full time schedule is ahead for the fall and winter. The anthracite belt has been one of few prosperous spots in the country and with mills and factories preparing for reopening, a rejuvenation is predicted.

Some of the biggest industrial firms were forced to curtail and shut down in order to get back to "normalcy," but are to re-employ the men in large numbers.

Building trades are hampered by war time prices, but when they are lowered the anthracite belt will have returned to conditions that prevailed before the war. There is the feeling that such prosperity is almost at hand.

Business men and workmen are optimistic. Banks have been doing a big business, merchants have bought heavily and have had a good summer.

DELAYED SHIPS REACH NEW YORK

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—Three liners, bringing hundreds of immigrants from Italy, Greece, and Ireland, officially "arrived" here today. They crossed the three mile limit almost on the stroke of midnight, after having delayed their arrival in American waters for several days to evade the new immigration restriction law. The Megali Hellas, the Greek steamer, which, with 130 American passengers, has been riding the waters of Fire Island since last week, came in first, landing a fuming lot of Americans, but a joyful horde of Greeks, who might have had to return to the old country had the Megali "arrived" during July. The Cedric, carrying immigrants, arrived from Queenstown and is believed to have delayed enroute to avoid difficulties with the new law.

An American Cardinal.

Rome, Aug. 1.—A consistory will be held at the Vatican in October when five cardinals probably will be created, including one American, it was learned in Vatican circles today.

Bahl's New Venture.

Benjamin Bahl of No. 19 West Union street is removing today from Schenectady, where he will engage in the clothing business.

GERMAN RED CROSS AIDING RUSSIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Berlin, August 1.—The German Red Cross has heeded Russia's cry for help. Announcement was made today that a ship is being loaded with medical supplies with which to fight the Russian cholera plague. It will be sent to Petrograd. A number of German doctors are going with the medicines to cooperate with the Russian Red Cross.

A gloomy and desolate picture of life in Russia is painted in advices received by the Berliner Tageblatt through "underground channels" from Petrograd. The Petrograd correspondent of the German newspaper says:

"The discipline of the workers has broken down, but there is practically no work because there is no raw materials, no iron, no coal, no nails for building and no tools. In Petrograd the ration of bread is one pound daily. The people are supposed to get a quarter of a pound of sugar monthly and sometimes they get a pound of dried fish. Speculators are profiteering in the little stocks of butter, coffee, lard, shoes, clothing and other necessities that are on hand."

"Seventy-five per cent of the factories are idle. The workmen are fleeing from the country in search of food."

"There are about 1,000,000 inhabitants in Saratov and Samara that are in desperate need. They require approximately 250,000 tons of grain at once for nourishment. The crops in the Saratov and Samara districts were failures."

"A farmer in the Volk district of Saratov writing to a friend in Petrograd said: 'It's like a desolate district of the dead here. The people are living almost asquid, filth and disease. Unless our village gets help, the 2,500 inhabitants will die.'"

"Another farmer living in the Tschelki district of Samara wrote: 'Our people are eating grass and weeds, field rats and fodder or anything else that has any nourishment. They are so weak that they fall over one another. In the district of Saransk the people are mere shadows of human beings. If one secures a handful of grain he mixes it with tree bark, ground up acorns and moss and a little chaff.'"

"In the Volga district the cholera fatalities reach 90 per cent."

STRIKE ENDS IN ROCHESTER

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 1.—The building trades strike which has affected close to 3,000 workers in the building trades, came to an end here today, both sides having agreed to arbitrate. The strike has been in progress since April 1, when the union workers quit, following their refusal to grant the contractors' demand for a 25 per cent wage reduction.

K. OF C. TO FIGHT WHITE PLAGUE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 1.—A comprehensive and sustained attack by 800,000 men and their families on the White Plague was launched today at the International Convention of the Knights of Columbus.

Under the chairmanship of Dr. E. W. Buckley of St. Paul, supreme physician of the Knights of Columbus, the Knights throughout the United States and Canada will initiate and maintain a campaign against tuberculosis to be supported by local aid and maintenance of beds in sanitariums and the rendering of material aid to consumptives.

"After an exhaustive research and consultation with noted experts on tuberculosis," Dr. Buckley reported, "the Knights of Columbus anti-tuberculosis committee has concluded that concentrated localized activity is the most effective weapon against the spread of tuberculosis."

Knights of Columbus educators from all parts of the country met today to formulate final plans for the correspondence school system. The Knights, it was announced, plan the largest correspondence school in the United States to augment their free night school system numbering 132 units and serving 150 former service men and women.

Approximately 20,000 delegates are here today to attend the convention. Secretary of Commerce Hoover today wired the convention congratulating the Knights on their educational work in promoting foreign trade service study among ex-service men.

Other messages were received from Secretary of the Navy Denby and Ignace Paderewski, former Premier of Poland, who is at Paso Robles, California.

Uprising in Guatemala.

Mexico City, Aug. 1.—An uprising against the Guatemalan government has broken out at Casillas in the Santa Rosa district, the Guatemalan legation was advised today.

One Speeder Arrested.

David Jacobson of White Plains was arrested Sunday afternoon by Officer Soper on a charge of driving 30 miles an hour. He gave bail for his appearance later.

HOOVER TAKES STEPS TO RELIEVE RUSSIAN FAMINE SUFFERERS

Delivery of American Prisoners Out of Russia Must Precede Actual Relief Work—Director of American Relief Administration to Proceed At Once to Riga.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, August 1.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover today cabled Walter L. Brown, director for Europe of the American Relief Administration to proceed at once to Riga to open negotiations for the relief of the Russian famine situation. Hoover's instructions to Brown, who is now in London, stipulated that the Americans held prisoner in Russia must be delivered at Riga before discussions were opened.

Secretary Hoover's action followed receipt of the reply of Maxim Gorky to Hoover's offer of American relief to starving Russia on condition that the Americans detained by the Soviet authorities would be released immediately.

The text of the reply, as made public today, shows that the Russians are willing to accept all the conditions laid down in Secretary Hoover's message.

The text of the cablegram sent to Mr. Brown follows:

"As to cable forwarded through you from Mr. Gorky of July 28 would be glad if you would proceed at once to Riga. It is of course assumed that the prisoners will have been delivered out of Russia as demanded by the state department before you open discussions. You will recognize that such a course is the most primary evidence of willingness to assure life and liberty of our staff. You will please advise Messrs. Gorky and Kameneff."

The message received by Hoover does not differ substantially from the press reports from Riga of the terms of the reply. It is therefore assumed that the communication is a complete acceptance of the conditions laid down by Hoover, and subsequently reiterated by Secretary of State Hughes in a communication to the Soviet authorities.

The release of American prisoners is not expected to have any great effect upon commercial relations between the United States and Russia. Reports to this government, officials stated, indicate that there is no economic basis for the resumption of trade on a considerable scale. The gold supply of Russia is practically exhausted, it is contended and there is apparently no production for export. The fact that millions of Russians are facing starvation, officials said, is proof that there can be no substantial surplus of commodities in Russia.

At the navy department it was considered unlikely that American war vessels would be sent to bring home Americans who may be released from prison or detention in Soviet Russia. Officials pointed out that there are plenty of commercial vessels upon which the Americans may take passage for the United States, and the American consular authorities in Baltic states will probably be authorized to furnish funds for those among the released Americans who are not able to pay their own way.

Secretary Hoover said that American relief will begin to be available for needy Russians within two weeks. Large supplies are already at Danzig, he declared, which can be moved quickly to the more accessible portions of western Russia.

The American relief organization can take care of 1,000,000 Russian children and the probable expense involved will run from $1,000,000 to $1,250,000 a month, Hoover said. It is not possible now, he intimated, to state how long the relief work must continue. Even the supplies begin moving from Danzig into parts of Russia where famine appears to be worse, Hoover pointed out, several weeks must elapse before the relief machinery can be made most efficient. Hoover said that the relief administration in addition to furnishing food and other supplies will be prepared to extend medical assistance.

REVOLUTION ADDS TERROR IN RUSSIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Paris, Aug. 1.—A revolutionary uprising has added fresh terrors to the terrible famine and plague situation in Russia, but the government troops are crushing the rebels, said a Reval dispatch to L'Information today.

Four million starving, plague-stricken peasants are reported to be moving toward Moscow from the cholera and famine districts. The cholera is claiming 95 per cent of the residents of some districts.

The public service bureau has been notified by the workmen in the Volga district that all the factories will be turned back to their former owners under guarantees, the Reval dispatch added.

The Petrograd tramways are to be turned back to their Belgian owners.

An Erroneous Report.

Sunday the New York newspapers carried a despatch from Los Angeles, California to the effect that Mrs. Charles Slauson, 59 years old, a former resident of New York, had killed herself by shooting, which caused some anxiety in Kingston as it was thought the woman mentioned was the sister of Attorney Amos Van Etten, which proved to be untrue. Later in the day on Sunday Mr. Van Etten, who had seen the dispatch, got in communication with his sister.

Crisis in Lisbon.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Aug. 1.—The Portuguese legation anxiously waited word from Lisbon today regarding the new political crisis in the Portuguese capital. According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from the Spanish-Portuguese frontier the Lisbon garrison was suddenly called out to picket the streets, while cannon were planted to sweep the public squares. The cabinet met to discuss the situation.

Lightning Shocks Bathers.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—It takes a lot to shock ten at the beaches these days, but where one piece bathing suits failed, lightning succeeded. Thirty members of the New York Athletic Club were recovering today from injuries sustained when they were felled in a heap on a bathing pavilion floor in which they were sheltering from a violent electrical storm Sunday.

Rewarding The Divers.

An automobile party from the Catskills amused themselves Sunday while waiting at the Rhinecliff ferry dock for the boat by throwing dimes and dimes into the creek for a lot of boys to dive for. The youngsters proved to be adept divers, as they retrieved the shiners almost every time. One boy had his mouth so full of five and ten cent pieces he couldn't talk.

MORE CHOLERA IN RUSSIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Copenhagen, Aug. 1.—Now cholera cases are developing in the Samara district of Russia at the rate of 400 daily, according to information received here today from Riga. Thousands of children in the Samara district have been deserted by their parents in the wild flight of the populace from the plague ridden countryside.

The task of fighting the pestilence has been rendered doubly difficult by the bad sanitary conditions.

(The Samara district is in eastern Russia, stretching from the Volga to the Ural mountains. The area is 58,321 square miles and the population, at the outbreak of the war was 2,765,000. The capital city is Samara.)

LIVELY LIVED UP TO HIS NAME

Killed Hatfield and Chambers, West Virginia Gunmen, Who Were Up for Trial by Beating Them on the Draw.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Welch, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Sid Hatfield and Ed Chambers, two of the principal defendants in the great murder trial at Williamson, W. Va., several months ago, for the battle of Matewan, a year ago, were both shot and killed just before noon here today by P. E. Lively.

The two men were here to face trial for the alleged shooting up of the town of Matewan, W. Va. An argument ensued and Hatfield attempted to shoot Lively but the latter was too quick on the draw and beat Hatfield to it.

Passengers Steal Taxicab.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—Fashionable Fifth avenue was aroused from aristocratic couches at an early hour today to peep from behind blinds at a noisy pursuit of two auto bandits, who were chased after they had held up their own taxi driver and taken away his money and his cab. The bandits, who told the chauffeur they were ex-service men who had received a "dirty deal," escaped. Two detectives commandeered a car and went in pursuit, firing as they whirled through the usually quiet and always refined neighborhood, but failed to stop the stolen taxicab.

White Child With Negroes.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—The mystery of a pretty little white child, three years old, found, bruised and emaciated sleeping in a dark cellar between two negroes, during a drug raid, remained unsolved today. The negroes claim that they have had the child for three years, but the baby declares it remembers its "white mama."

MRS. MACKEY TELLS HOW TO LIVE LONG

Work and Mind Your Own Business is the Recipe Given by Former Kingston Resident Who Has Lived 92 Years.

Under the caption "Plenty of Work and Minding One's Own Business. Recipe for Long Life," says Mrs. Mackey, the Jacksonville, Fla., Metropolis of July 23 prints an interesting article, the woman referred to being Mrs. Emma Mackey, a former resident of Kingston. She is in her 92nd year and the Metropolis states is in excellent health and frequently enjoys long walks. The article is headed by a large picture of Mrs. Mackey, from which it appears that she is twenty years younger. Two years ago Mrs. Mackey, who is the grandmother of former City Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., and Grant M. Brinnier, visited Kingston, one of her daughters, now deceased, having married Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier. She is expected to come to this city in a short time, stopping on her return trip home from a trip to Ohio, where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. H. B. McGill. Her son, John H. Mackey, of Jacksonville, Fla., with whom his mother resides, is expected here in a week or two to visit relatives. He is one of the leading musicians of the south and was president of the Federation of Musicians of Florida, and was on the staff of Governor Catt. The Mackey family were residents on West O'Reilly street when residing in Kingston, and lived for a time at Eddyville and Ellenville.

The article in the Jacksonville Metropolis is as follows:

Mrs. Emma Mackey of 31 East Ashley street, mother of John H. Mackey and Mrs. Renie M. Gamble, is probably not only the oldest woman voter in Jacksonville, but claims to be the oldest pedestrian to cross the new St. Johns river bridge. She was the first woman to cast her vote in the Fourth ward.

Mrs. Mackey is in her 92nd year, but still enjoys excellent health and vigor. A few days ago she walked from her home to the Main street ferry and went to South Jacksonville, where she visited friends on Palm street. On leaving for home, Mrs. Mackey decided to walk across the new bridge. Although the weather was extremely warm, Mrs. Mackey said she was amply repaid by the view of the city that is only afforded by the big span.

She takes long walks frequently and is remarkably active for a person of her age.

Many remarkable things have taken place during Mrs. Mackey's life. She was alive—

Before envelopes came into use.

Before ether was used in surgical operations.

When the anti-slavery society was organized.

Many years before the Mormons settled in Salt Lake City.

Two years after omnibuses were first used in New York.

Many years before photography was perfected.

When pins were first made by machinery in America.

Two years after the first steam road was operated in the United States.

Before the first Republican national convention was held.

Before the first complete sewing machine was perfected.

Before the first telegraph line was built in the United States.

When the Hon. William P. Duval was governor of Florida.

Forty-four years before electric lights appeared.

When the state of Florida only had one-third of Jacksonville's present population.

Before the Seminole Indian wars began.

When the seventh president was holding office (and she was a Democrat).

Thirty-five years before Susan B. Anthony introduced before congress the woman suffrage amendment.

Has Perfect Eyesight.

Mrs. Mackey, still hale and hearty, has perfect eyesight and never wears glasses. She has most of her teeth and does all of her housework.

When Mrs. Mackey was past 70 years of age she made a trip to the summit of Pike's Peak, Colo., returning home via Galveston, Texas.

For many years she was a worker in secret societies, having served as an officer in the Golden Link Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star at Newark, N. J. She is now preparing to make her yearly visit north to her daughter, Mrs. H. B. McGill, in Ohio, and other relatives in New Jersey and New York.

Mrs. Mackey follows no rules for health. She says she has no patience with people who are eternally advising against what to eat and what not to eat. She eats anything she likes and at any time, and has meat three times a day.

She attributes the past 15 years of extra good health, however, to the wonderful sunny climate of Florida, which she says is not only invigorating, but is upbuilding to nerve and body. "Florida will add at least 10 years to anyone's life," she said.

But, Mrs. Mackey does advocate two things. One is plenty of work to occupy the mind as a means of contentment. The other is minding one's own business.

Why We Say "She."

The discussion being on why we refer to an automobile as "she," one man said it was because when a car is slicked up and attractive we all admire her; when she acts properly she is charming; yet we often drive her into improper action by lack of care, and when she gets old and has lost her style we try to discard her and get a more pleasing one.—Boston Transcript.

It Beats The Dickens.

It beats the deuce how the folks will weep As you lie in your coffin fast asleep And sing of your goodness in countless ways. While the parson preaches and talks and prays "Tis queer how the public will 'elogize' And laud you up to the vaulted skies; When the undertaker has called your bluff, And squirted you full of embalming stuff But when you walk on the earth, I swear, You were nothing more than a plodder there. And you'd have fainted or dropped down dead. At any praise that the public said It's only when you're lifeless stiff, That the heartless public will note the diff.

There are about forty-seven things to think of before you try to pass the car ahead. If you forget one you may find yourself all speeded up with no place to go.

There is a higher market value placed on smiles than there is on frowns.

Another sort of pitiless publicity is a bow-legged girl, with soup-bone ankles, wearing a short skirt on a windy day.

These are the zestful days! These are the days when one feels the primal urge! Who would prefer sitting in the shade to the glorious work of gardening, of working in the soil? Who would loaf when there is all nature calling to the big tasks ahead? Who? All of us, kid, all of us.

We know a girl who is entertaining company from out of town right now, and her chief worry is trying to remember to refer to the hired girl as a maid.

The old fashioned boy who used to ride to the county fair on a narrow gauge mule now has a grandson who motors up in a touring car.

To know what you prefer, instead of humbly saying amen to what the world tells you ought to prefer, is to have left your soul alive.—R. L. Stevenson.

SUMMER BREAKFASTS.

The warm weather breakfast will be lighter, of less food value, but sufficiently sustaining to keep machinery working. Unless a person is working at hard labor a breakfast of fruit, a dish of cereal, an egg with toast or a bit of bacon with a cupful of coffee or cocoa or a glass of milk is a satisfying meal. The cereal may be one that has been previously cooked and to serve it put it through a ricer, with cream and sugar. In a morning when the weather permits serve this best of waffles:

Waffles.—Take one and one-quarter cupful of sifted flour, one half teaspoonful each of soda and salt, one cupful of thick sour milk, the yolks of two eggs and the whites beaten stiff. Sift the dry ingredients, add the egg yolks with the milk and stir in after the mixture has been well beaten three table-spoonfuls of melted butter. Fold in the egg whites and bake on a hot waffle iron. Serve with cold maple syrup. If the hot syrup is used it destroys the crispness which is the charm of a waffle.

Southern Eggs.—Butter small ramekins and half fill with hot boiled rice. Slip a raw egg in each, season with salt and pepper, butter, grated cheese and a little chopped boiled ham. Set the dishes into hot water and cook in a moderate oven until the eggs are set.

Salmon Salad.—Take a can of salmon, add equal measures of chopped celery, a few olives finely minced, a sour pickle chopped, and one-half cupful of fresh grated coconut. If the fresh is not obtainable soak in a little sweet milk until soft. Serve on lettuce with a plain boiled dressing.

Madras Beef.—Slice two small onions, one apple and a stalk or two of celery very fine, cook in hot butter, sprinkle a table-spoonful of curry powder over the dish, add the juice of half a lemon and turn in a few slices of rare roast beef cut very thin with a cupful of roast beef gravy. Simmer 20 minutes and serve with hot seasoned rice.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PUZZLED PURPLE FINCH.

"I am very much puzzled," said Mr. Purple Finch.

"Are you indeed?" asked Mrs. Purple Finch.

"I most certainly am," said Mr. Purple Finch.

"Are you indeed?" said Mrs. Purple Finch, once more.

She really didn't know what puzzled meant, and she was hoping that Mr. Purple Finch would explain without her having to ask him what it meant.

She waited a moment longer and then Mr. Purple Finch said:

"Yes, I do not understand it. It puzzles me. It is something I cannot understand."

She thought quite hard and then she knew that to be puzzled meant to be unable to understand.

"What don't you understand?" asked Mrs. Purple Finch.

"I don't understand why I am called a Purple Finch," said Mr. Purple Finch.

"Well, for that matter I don't see why I should be called a Purple Finch either," said Mrs. Finch. "I'm certainly not purple. I wear brown and gray feathers, but then of course the reason I am Mrs. Purple Finch is because I am the mate of Mr. Purple Finch."

"Ah, but that is what puzzles me," said Mr. Purple Finch. "I am not a purple colored bird either. I do not wear purple feathers."

"I wear rose-colored feathers, and I have brown touches in my wings and tail and upon my back. In fact, my wings are brown."

"But the color which I love above all others is rose. Yes, I wear rose colored feathers and am considered quite beautiful by those who know me."

"Why should I be called a purple finch when I am not purple? Why should such a thing be? I do not understand it. I am quite puzzled."

"I do not understand it either," said Mrs. Purple Finch. "The eggs which hatch out into birdlings aren't purple, either. They are green in color."

"And they are decorated with little black spots. There is nothing purple about the eggs, either."

"It is indeed very puzzling, and I do not understand."

Mrs. Purple Finch well understood what the word puzzled meant by now, so she could use it herself.

"You haven't been singing as much lately as you did in the spring," Mrs. Purple Finch told her mate.

"Ah, my dear," said Mr. Purple Finch, "when the early spring is on the way and the snow is beginning to go, I sing for joy that the great springtime is coming."

"But when the summer comes there is so much for me to do. I have marketing to attend to and other duties of that sort, looking after my fine family and so forth that I haven't quite the time to sing as I had in the springtime."

"It doesn't mean that I am any less happy. It merely means that I'm a little busier, that is all."

"Yes, I do sing all the time when the springtime is here. I sing a strong warbling song of the springtime and of the going of the snow."

"I love to sing that song. It is an old favorite with me. I like to get on a high tree and sing as hard as I can!"

"Springtime and singing somehow seem to go together."

"But I do not understand about my name. Now, Mr. Purple Grackle is purple. That is, he is partly purple and does wear some fine purple feathers."

"But why I am named the Purple Finch is something I do not know, and if anyone will tell me why, I will be greatly obliged. Yes, I will be greatly obliged."

"I would like to know, too," said Mrs. Purple Finch. "I wish someone would tell us."

"Perhaps we will yet find out," said Mr. Purple Finch. "Let us hope so."

"Let us hope so," said Mrs. Purple Finch. "Indeed, let us hope so, for we do not want to be puzzled always."

NOT AN ELECTRIC

GRIT grinds; it wears out rugs, and rugs are expensive these days.

Pull out the grit with The Vacuette Vacuum Sweeper

The strong suction, aided by a revolving bristle brush, does it; and will absolutely pick up ALL lint, threads, combings, etc., as well. The Vacuette cleans thoroughly, is light (7 pounds) and, remember it is "not an electric."

Preferred an Airplane.

Teacher—Now, Tom, hold your head up and your shoulders back—you'd like to have a fine carriage when you're a man, wouldn't you?

Tom—Well, I'd rather have an airplane.—Sydney Bulletin.

Influence of Latin Language. English was quite a pure speech up to the year 1600; that is, it consisted only of English words and English phrases. Then, with the Norman invasion of that year, there began to come into England a language which was not English in any sense—but French. Now, French is a kind of Latin—it is "Latin with the ends bitten off," or very much altered; and Latin is the language of the people who lived in Italy, and whose capital was Rome. Latin is the very essence—the basis and the staple of the French language; but it is nothing more than a considerable contribution to our English tongue. It has given us many thousands of words; it has given us no habits—that is, it has given us no grammar. And it has not had much influence on the build of our sentences.—From "The Art of Writing English."

Mothers All Over the World

Should Be Told About Sykes Comfort Powder," says Nurse Fry

Independence, Mo.—"I wish I could tell mothers all over the world about Sykes Comfort Powder. I could write all day of the wonderful results I have had in using it on children. I have proved over and over again it is the only powder that will heal and prevent chafing, scalding, rashes, skin irritations and sores, and the little baby whose picture I am sending you has always been entirely free from such troubles by its use."

—Laura M. Fry, Independence, Mo.

The reason Sykes Comfort Powder is so successful in such cases is because it contains six healing, antiseptic ingredients not found in ordinary talcums. Physicians, mothers and nurses call it "A Healing Wonder."

IRWIN ENDS OFFICIAL TERM

Max Kaplan of North Front street, who has been chief of the cashier and miscellaneous list department and deputy internal revenue collector during the administration of Irwin at Albany, tendered his resignation to Mr. Irwin last week, to take effect on Sunday when Mr. Irwin's term as collector ended.

The ceremonies attending the turning over of the office of collector by Mr. Irwin to his successor, Cyrus Durey, took place at nine o'clock this morning in the United States district court room in the Federal building at Albany, and motion pictures were taken of the ceremonies.

Much technical detail was necessary to the transfer of the office, which was conducted by government auditors. It is said the office has been so well managed that in the balancing of ledgers carrying millions of dollars there is no discrepancy. This greatly facilitated the work of transfer and made the signing of schedules by Mr. Durey comparatively easy. Three copies of the schedules were made, one for Mr. Irwin, one for Mr. Durey and one for the Treasury Department files at Washington.

Since he left the office seven years ago, Mr. Durey found that the business had increased under Mr. Irwin by approximately $3,000,000 annually, paid by 12,000 taxpayers, to nearly $100,000,000 paid by 250,000 taxpayers, the district having become one of the most important in the country. The percentage of cost of collection of taxes has been eight cents of one per cent, which means that 99.2 cents of every dollar paid at the Albany office was used by the government for its expenses outside of the cost of the Albany office. The percentage of cost of collection has been among the lowest of any of the internal revenue districts in the United States.

Social Action and Affection.

CHARLES PROPER TO TRY AGAIN

Charles Proper of Rosendale, can not be accused of not trying to operate a bus line from Lawrenceville, Rosendale to Kingston, for he is now preparing to make his fourth attempt to secure permission of Kingston's common council to operate over certain of the city streets. It is expected that his application will come up Tuesday evening at the meeting of the aldermen.

At the last meeting of the council, Proper's petition was rejected by the aldermen. He has made three applications so far and all have been rejected, and has now filed with City Clerk Doremus his fourth application for a permit to operate. He is again represented by Attorney Frank W. Brooks.

AT THE THEATRES.

Tom Mix At Keeney's—Harry Carey At Auditorium.

Stunts, humor and thrills are on the program at Keeney's today when Tom Mix appears in his latest "Riding Romeo." Mix, as a cowboy, invents many home comforts in this photoplay, some of which may be of help to those who hate to get up early cold mornings. Another rollicking Tommerville Trolley comedy is programmed today, entitled "The Skipper's Scheme." Tuesday the superb special production "Hearts are Trumps" Cecil Raligh's titanic melodrama of love and fascinating intrigue, enacted by an all star cast.

At the Auditorium, Harry Carey in one of the most dramatic and thrilling stories of the old frontier ever screened "Desperate Trails," the story of a strong man who is cheated by fate of both the woman he loves and the one he thinks he loves. A Keystone Comedy "Vampire Ambrose" is also programmed. Tuesday a special feature attraction.

The Muse of Dancing.

The Muse Terpsichore was the inventress and patroness of the art of dancing as accessory to the singing or recitation of lyrical poetry. She is generally represented with the lyre and plectrum, crowned with flowers and in a mirthful attitude.

Too Curious.

Thillie Clinger says the reason she didn't last long as salesgirl at the jewelry counter was because when a man came in and said he wanted something nice for his baby she asked him if his baby was a boy, a girl or a chicken.—Dallas News.

ORGANDIE FOR SUMMER WEAR

Organdie always makes up alluringly for summer frocks. On this costume the embroidery is no set design; it is scattered everywhere, and the petal-edged panels all aid in making this violet-colored frock delightful and summery.

MADE-OVER "BARGAIN" GOWNS

Slight Alterations Will Enable the Transformation Where There Are Objectionable Features.

Quite frequently shops offer excellent values in dresses that are extreme in style or that have some feature about them that blocks their sale. One's first impulse is to reject such a model, but experience has taught one every shopper that models of this type are possible after they have been revised at home or by a reliable tailor or seamstress.

An unbecoming neck-line, a sleeve that is the wrong length or does not fit well, even the introduction of a conspicuous color in some way may be altered with gratifying results.

Eliminating objectionable details, a dress with a very full circular skirt proved to be rather a drag on the market at one shop, principally because brilliant green cloth with steel buttons had been inserted at the sides, so that in the swing of the skirt a not too generous display of hosiery would result. The cut of the skirt was extreme enough to give pause, but plus the spectacular touch of green it was voted impossible by the women to whom it was offered, until along came a woman with a vision that could see black satin substituted for the green, and the severe renaissance neckline could be softened by opening the front of the plain bodice and inserting a V of some flattering lingerie material—changes, which, while very slight, altered the entire spirit of the gown.

Now that sleeves of contrasting material are voted smart, one might be tempted to select a gown which could be altered by changing the sleeves. Of course, any changes one's originality might suggest would be helpful to the woman who to her dismay finds that the model she selected has been selected by her nearest neighbor or her dearest enemy.

FASHION FRILLS

Canton crepe continues to be the season's most fashionable fabric.

Black and navy, with an occasional gray gown, make the sum total of most smart daytime gatherings.

Lavender hats worn with dark dresses are very smart.

Pelt hats, in white, gray, lavender, flame and orange are fruit or flower trimmed and much worn.

Coat dresses, the front draped over to the side and held with one button, are much worn in navy or black cloth.

Lace-trimmed hats, with cascades of lace off the left and sometimes off both sides, are worn.

Baroque pearls worn on a silken cord are the latest fancy.

Thin, silver-embroidered jackets are worn with plain skirts, giving a two-fabric effect.

White veiling is having a tremendous vogue and usually it is dotted with variously colored chenille.

Coffee bands coming down over the forehead and fastening under the chin at the sides have been seen much lately.

Lace has invaded the realm of the purse—the outside this time! Afternoon bags, pouch shapes, are often fashioned of lace.

Lace Cap for Baby.

Heavy lace caps for babies are easily made by using white lace altar and drawing in the fullness at the back with ribbon run through a tiny hem. The edges of the bonnet are trimmed with lace ruffles and the long strings are made of the same material. Some pretty caps are made from scraps of lace and embroidery of all kinds and shapes, sometimes with three or four different kinds of lace and edged with narrow ruffles of lace and finished with a sprig of baby's breath.

Crope de Chine.

It is possible now to have soft, flange and hat of crope de Chine, and the effect for summer and early fall is good. A cape is a handy garment to throw over the crope de Chine suit for warmth, if needed.

Africa Was Half World's Gold.

Africa has one-half the world's gold, according to the estimates, over half of the output, the share as much from the North American and southern Europe than Europe and America combined.

Bought Right to Name Asteroid.

A certain German astronomer, who discovered a new asteroid, advertised in the newspapers that whoever first sent him a post office order for $250 might have the privilege of naming it. The offer was taken up by Baron Rothschild, who sent his check with dispatch, that the newly discovered body should be named after one of the ladies of the baron's family.

Twenty-five Brooklyn families pulled up stakes and rolled away to the west in a colonists' caravan, a modern edition of the old "Forty-Niners" wagon train. The purpose and the spirit is the same, but the old granite schoolhouse have been replaced by automobiles, trailers and service trucks. William D. Scott, of Brooklyn, is at the head of the caravan, which is en route to a tract of 3,000 acres, just south of Bull, Idaho, where they will clear away the brush, build themselves clapboard homesteads, and start to grow alfalfa. All the families in the caravan are 100 per cent Americans. They own their own automobiles, hold their own parties and have no debts. After receiving a request from Brooklyn President Riegleman, Mayor Heelan gave Mr. Scott a letter to be delivered to Governor Davis of Idaho. The illustration in the upper left-hand corner shows one of the units of the caravan which is to be used for sleeping purposes. Below is Mrs. Thomas Tudor and her daughters, Alice and Martha, who are making the journey.

Coat dresses, the front draped over to the side and held with one button, are much worn in navy or black cloth.

Lace-trimmed hats, with cascades of lace off the left and sometimes off both sides, are worn.

Baroque pearls worn on a silken cord are the latest fancy.

Chic, all-over embroidery jackets are worn with plain skirts, giving a two-fabric effect.

White veiling is having a tremendous vogue and usually it is dotted with variously colored chenille.

Golfing hands coming down over the forehead and fastening under the belt at the sides have been seen much lately.

Lace has invaded the realm of the purse—the outside this time! Afternoon bags, pouch shape, are often fashioned of it.

Lace Cap for Baby.

Pretty lace caps for babies are easily made by using white lace all over and drawing in the fullness at the back with ribbon run through a tiny hem. The edges of the bonnet are trimmed with lace ruffles and the long strings are made of fine insertion about three inches wide. Some pretty caps are made from scraps of lace and embroidery of all kinds and shapes, sometimes with three or four different kinds in one cap, edged with narrow ruffles of lace and finished with a pompon of lace or ribbon.

Crepe de Chine.

It is possible now to have suit, blouse and hat of crepe de chine, and the effect for summer and early fall is good. A cape is a handy garment to throw over the crepe de chine suit for warmth, if needed.

Bought Right to Name Asteroid.

A certain German astronomer, having discovered a new asteroid, advertised in the newspapers that whoever first sent him a post office order for $250 might have the privilege of naming it. The offer was taken up by Baron Rothschild, who sent his check with directions that the newly discovered body should be named after one of the ladies of the baron's family.

Twenty-five Brooklyn families pulled up stakes and rolled away to the west in a colonists' caravan, a modern edition of the old "Forty-Niners" wagon train. The purpose and the spirit is the same, but the old prairie schooners have been replaced by automobiles, trailers and service trucks. William D. Scott, of Brooklyn, is at the head of the caravan, which is en route to a tract of 5,000 acres, just south of Buhl, Idaho, where they will clear away the brush, build themselves clapboard bungalows, and start to grow alfalfa. All the families in the caravan are 100 per cent Americans. They own their own automobiles, hold their own purses and have no debts. After receiving a send-off from Borough President Riogelman, Mayor Hylan gave Mr. Scott a letter to be delivered to Governor Davis of Idaho. The illustration in the upper left-hand corner shows one of the units of the caravan which is to be used for sleeping purposes. On the right is William D. Scott, who is at the head of the modern prairie schooners. Below is Mrs. Thomas Tudor and her daughters, Alice and Martha, who are making the journey.

KINGSTON, N. Y., AUGUST 1, 1921

When we reflect upon what a needless and readily avoidable war did for Germany, we can be pleased but hardly surprised to hear that a score of nation-wide organizations in that country are shortly to hold demonstrations under the slogan—"Never Again War!"

The Rev. Henry Sloan Coffin, Presbyterian pastor of New York city, told a conference of ministers recently that "people do not go to church because they do not learn anything there." Presumably he meant that the new pulpitering, which concerns itself chiefly with politics and civic reform legislation, is not taken very seriously.

A Hungarian count with an American wife, two famous Russian dancers of the Metropolitan Opera House, business men well known in this country who came on business errands, as well as immigrants in more pitiable plight, were among those detained on the Mauretania the other day under what the New York World describes as "the most asinine immigration law ever passed by a country claiming to be civilized."

If a law prohibiting people from assembling in public is a good thing for Kingston, it ought to be good for every other city in the United States. If other cities have not heard of the advantages of such a law, they ought to hear. If Mayor Canfield and the common council are unselfish patriots having the best interests of the people at heart, they ought to visit other cities and make speeches. If they are not allowed to talk in any city "without a written permit of the mayor," they ought to know that such a city is a safe place to live in and ought willingly to move on to the next city. If in any city the people should assemble and tell them to mind their own business, they will know that the people of that city are in urgent need of an ordinance like Kingston's latest ordinance. The possibilities for the mayor and common council to accomplish much good in this direction are limited only by the Canadian and Mexican boundaries and by the shores of the Atlantic and Pacific. And Canada and Mexico and every other nation better behave themselves or the mayor and common council will take away their right of free speech and free assembly. They might omit Russia from the list because such rights have been denied there already.

SMUTS AS A GO-BETWEEN.

General Smuts says the Irish problem can be solved, and even the experienced and doubtful part of the world will rejoice in the promise thus held out. The South African Premier publicly expressed this opinion in London after his visit to Ireland, a visit encouraged by both Lloyd-George and the Sinn Féin leaders. The details of his proposition are not given, but it is known that he urged De Valera and his Sinn Féin associates to accept a form of autonomous government similar to that established and successfully maintained in South Africa, and surely the true friends of Ireland will hope that such counsel will prevail. No doubt what was proposed by General Smuts was acceptable to Lloyd-George, and so to all appearances the responsibility of decision rests upon the Sinn Féin leaders.

No better go-between than Jan Christian Smuts could have been chosen. Though opposed to any settlement "without the British empire," to which he is intensely loyal, he is said to have feelings of lively sympathy for the Irish people. He can understand their attitude, for no longer ago than the dawn of this century he was in arms along with the other Boer leaders against the British forces in South Africa. The success of the British in so soon making loyal friends of the Boers in one of the marvels of history. The same plan they adopted included stocking the war-ravaged Boer farms and then making a Boer general President of the new South African Union of States. General Smuts hopes to see the great achievement repeated in Ireland, in such modified form as may be desirable. We plan may fail, as all previous plans for Ireland have failed, but he has made an effort worthy of his fame.

ALL ARE CRIMINALS.

The limit of punishment which may be imposed by the city judge for violating a city ordinance is a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment for not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. This is the limit which City Judge Schirlick can impose on any "Red" or anarchist convicted under Mayor Canfield's gag-law, no matter how inflammatory the speech may be. If the speech of any real "Red" or anarchist is worthy of punishment, the Federal government has enough authority to deport him. Mayor Canfield and the common council are making up for their lack of real power by depriving innocent citizens of the right to talk in public or to gather for the purpose of listening to other people talk. In the opinion of the mayor and the common council, all alike are to be treated as criminals if they violate his pet gag-law. The man who attends a meeting which has not been "authorized by a written permit from the mayor" is just as guilty of crime as the man who urges the overthrow of the government of the United States.

Why do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper. Look for answers in this column.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. What will cure mosquito bites?
2. What can I feed a common mud turtle? Can I tame it?
3. Please describe the bobolink, also its song, food, nest and color of eggs.

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. What are thorns?

Thorns are modified shoots growing from buds as leaves and shoots do. They may be simple or branched. In some plants thorns replace stipules, the latter being those embryonic leaves, usually in pairs, that clasp the base of the leaf stalk of many plants.

2. Do fishes live to a great age?

Only captive fishes can be kept track of, and unless these are living normally, they would hardly be a test of conditions of a wild fish's existence. Some attempt has been made to tag salmon and cod fishes, to get data on their movements, and a tagged fish if caught many years after being released, would afford light on that individual's longevity, but not on the species. In a professional aquarium scientifically managed, some fishes live a number of years, and some die quickly. A goldfish seventeen years old is on record.

3. What do newly hatched native pheasants feed on, and how does the old hen feed them?

Pheasants are altricial birds, that is, are born with down covering, and able to run about after the mother, catching insects for food. Domesticated pheasants are allowed to follow their bantam-brother mother, to pick up some natural food, and are fed various combinations—hard-boiled eggs mashed with cracker or dried bread crumbs, bought pheasant meat scalded with hot water, dried ants eggs, dried cottage cheese, and some green stuff like lettuce and chickweed.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

July 31, 1901.—One hundred and fifteen men employed on Second and Ninth ward sewers struck for shorter day.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Raven are organizing Miss Harriet's cottage for the summer.

Frank D. Carr of Pine Hill was a visitor in Oliveria, Friday.

THE REV. P. N. CHASE'S MAIL.

Prominent Ulster "Dry" Gets Unusually Abusive Letter.

You damned old fool, you and the rest of Anderson's bunch of scoundrels have killed more good people by this prohibition work of yours than if we had what people wanted. There is more rotten rum sold today in Kingston than there ever was, and more young boys are drinking and getting it than ever before. You should be proud of killing and making people blind. You will have a good while to pray if that will do any good.

PROHIBITION.

The above letter was received a few days since. My rule is to throw any anonymous letter into the fire but this one is couched in such choice language, and such terms of endearment and withal is really a model of the way an old man should be addressed by a younger one, that I think you will agree with me that it should be made public. If young people would preserve it, it might be of great value to them some time in the future.

And I would have been in utter ignorance of the author if he had not proclaimed it from the house tops.

But really, Mr. Editor, it goes to show just the kind of people who make up the net crowd, and it also shows us how desperate their cause is. Very truly yours,

P. N. CHASE.

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, August 1.—Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Walker and son Remson of Peconic Hills, N. Y., are spending some time with friends in this village.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Walker and son Remson, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Conner, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Barley and son Cornelius, Mrs. U. Bartinger and son Everett, Mrs. Garton Keeler, Mrs. D. Rhinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Snyder, Miss A. M. Hotelling, and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Markle enjoyed an outing on Thursday afternoon and although a heavy shower came up in the late afternoon, a very enjoyable time was had by all and no one regretted a wetting. Lunch was taken by the party and through the kindness of the Rev. French of Harley the party was given the use of the church shade and tables and benches to use for their supper, and to say the least, full justice was done to the good things that were provided to satisfy the inner man.

During the shower it was necessary that some of the ladies be carried across the wet place of ground between the shade, but fortunately no one was dropped during the operation, and the party returned home at nine, well satisfied with their outing.

The barn of J. M. Schoerer was struck by lightning on Thursday afternoon and burned. We extend our sympathies to his brother Schoerer.

The next sermon of the Free church and parson will be held on the lawn of the Reformed Church on Thursday evening, August 4th, by the G. C. A. and N. P. U. Sunday school classes.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

By ALFRED STEPHEN BRYAN

For Summer Tuxedo Wear: Black Jacket And White Trousers—Forked-End Tuxedo Tie—White Waistcoats With Informal Evening Dress—A "Country Squire" Straw

New York, July 30

SINCE Bluebeard, the bogey, it has been the way of humans that if you forbid something you at once make it attractive to some people. There are always men who fairly tangle to transgress the established rules of correct dress, simply because the breach is more inviting than the observance. This is particularly true of evening dress and of midmost summer. To be sure, when the night is sultry and all that sort of thing, conventional evening clothes seem a goodish bit of a burden. Nevertheless, one cannot well go in for cavalier comfort. Wiser heads than ours instituted evening dress to maintain dignity and uniformity in men's looks and to prevent that hedge-podge which is inevitable, if we all "gang our ain gait". Still, being correctly turned out of a summer evening for say, a dance, does not at all necessitate "going a martyr, if you know what to wear and where to wear it. Thin black worsted is no heavier than any woolen cloth worn in the daytime. Evening waistcoats are now cut without backs, consisting of merely a narrow band of cloth below the collar and above the waistline. Indeed, the waistcoat, with the dinner (Tuxedo) jacket, may be omitted altogether and a narrow black silk sash may be worn, thus hiding the line where trousers and shirt come together.

Shawl Lapel; Link Button

Whilst pairing off the black dinner (Tuxedo) jacket with white serge or flannel trousers, as portrayed in the accompanying sketch, is not to be recommended for all occasions, such a combination is to be met at country and seaside dance and about vacation resorts generally. Collegians and the legions who follow them go in for this sort of thing. It may not be strictly correct, but how can one be correctly strict, when one perceives like a harvest-hand? The jacket shown has satin-faced shawl lapels, raised sleeve-heads, semi-vertical side pockets and a slanting breast pocket. A front link button is the only anchorage. Unlike daytime jackets, this one is well-waisted, rather short and worn fastened. The trousers are roomy at hip and knee and cut without bottom turn-ups. The collar is the wing and the black bow-knot, snug of knot and spreading of ends, is worn over, not under, the collar-tabs.

Some time ago it was a fashion, or to be precise, a fad among youngsters to affect the turned-down Tuxedo collar with the tie ends pushed out of sight beneath the collar-band on each side. This practice has lapsed, because either it was not becoming, or it was becoming too widely used to be acceptable to those who would almost rather be dead, than not be different from the generality of us. The hair-apparent to this fad is illustrated above. The tie, which has split or forked ends, is drawn up right-and-tight against the top of the collar, thus achieving an easy-breezy look, which is not half-bad, if not wholly good.

Tradition Be Hanged

It may come as a bit of a shock to the stickler for the hard-and-fast conventions, endeared by custom and hallowed by tradition, that as many men, if not more, wear the white waistcoat today with the dinner (Tuxedo) jacket, as the black waistcoat. This change has come about gradually and almost imperceptibly, until it is now established among well-turned-out men in the more sophisticated centres. A white waistcoat of such a type is pictured here. It is worn with the black bow-knot tie, the wing collar and the two-button shirt, having a limp, semi-starched bosom. Be good enough to observe the new narrow waistline of this 4-button garment, the buttons set close together at the bottom, the broad, deep shawl lapels and the cut away sleeves (armholes).

At the top of the column is reproduced a straw hat woven, Panama shape, of banana fibre, a braid which is not expensive, yet looks spruce and is astonishingly light and cool for midsummer. The creased crown, broad brim and very narrow ribbon lend to this quite an air of the ruddy "master of broad acres" surveying his calves—that is, in the clover or the barn, not in his stockings.

General Smuts says the Irish problem can be solved, and even the experienced and doubtful part of the world will rejoice in the promise thus held out. The South African Premier publicly expressed this opinion in London after his visit to Ireland, a visit encouraged by both Lloyd-George and the Sinn Féin leaders. The details of his proposition are not given, but it is known that he urged De Valera and his Sinn Féin associates to accept a form of autonomous government similar to that established and successfully maintained in South Africa, and surely the true friends of Ireland will hope that such counsel will prevail. No doubt what was proposed by General Smuts was acceptable to Lloyd-George, and so to all appearances the responsibility of decision rests upon the Sinn Féin leaders.

No better go-between than Jan Christian Smuts could have been chosen. Though opposed to any settlement "without the British empire," to which he is intensely loyal, he is said to have feelings of lively sympathy for the Irish people. He can understand their attitude, for no longer ago than the dawn of this century he was in arms along with the other Boer leaders against the British forces in South Africa. The success of the British in so soon making loyal friends of the Boers is one of the marvels of history. The wise plan they adopted included restoring the war-ravaged Boer farms and then making a Boer general President of the new South African Union of States. General Smuts hopes to see the great achievement repeated in Ireland, in such modified form as may be desirable. His plan may fail, as all previous plans for Ireland have failed, but he has made an effort worthy of his fame.

ALL ARE CRIMINALS.

The limit of punishment which may be imposed by the city judge for violating a city ordinance is a fine not exceeding $50 or imprisonment for not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. This is the limit which City Judge Schirick can impose on any "Red" or anarchist convicted under Mayor Canfield's gag-law, no matter how inflammatory the speech may be. If the speech of any real "Red" or anarchist is worthy of punishment, the Federal government has enough authority to deport him. Mayor Canfield and the common council are making up for their lack of real power by depriving innocent citizens of the right to talk in public or to gather for the purpose of listening to other people talk. In the opinion of the mayor and the common council, all alike are to be treated as criminals if they violate his pet gag-law. The man who attends a meeting which has not been "authorized by a written permit from the mayor" is just as guilty of crime as the man who urges the overthrow of the government of the United States.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. What are thorns?

Thorns are modified shoots growing from buds as leaves and shoots do. They may be simple or branched. In some plants thorns replace stipules, the latter being those embryonic leaves, usually in pairs, that clasp the base of the leaf stalk of many plants.

2. Do fishes live to a great age?

Only captive fishes can be kept track of, and unless these are living normally, they would hardly be a test of conditions of a wild fish's existence. Some attempt has been made to tag salmon and cod fishes, to get data on their movements, and a tagged fish if caught many years after being released, would afford light on that individual's longevity, but not on the species. In a professional aquarium scientifically managed, some fishes live a number of years, and some die quickly. A goldfish seventeen years old is on record.

3. What do newly hatched native pheasants feed on, and how does the old hen feed them?

Pheasants are altricial birds, that is, are born with down covering and able to run about after the mother, catching insect food. Domesticated pheasant chicks are allowed to follow their parent hen for food, and are fed various combinations—hard-boiled egg mashed with cracker, or dried bread crumbs, bought pheasant meal scalded with hot water, dried ants eggs, dried cottage cheese, and some green stuff like lettuce and chickweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Roven are occupying Miss Harned's cottage for the summer.

Fred D. Cure of Pine Hill was a visitor in Oliveria, Friday.

THE REV. P. N. CHASE'S MAIL.

Prominent Ulster "Dry" Gets Unusually Abusive Letter.

You damned old fool, you and the rest of Anderson's bunch of scoundrels have killed more good people by this prohibition work of yours than if we had what people wanted. There is more rotten rum sold today in Kingston than there ever was and more young boys are drinking and getting it than ever before. You should be proud of killing and making people blind. You will have a good while to pray if that will do any good.

PROHIBITION.

The above letter was received a few days since. My rule is to throw any anonymous letter into the fire but this one is couched in such choice language, and such terms of endearment and withal is really a model of the way an old man should be addressed by a younger one, that I think you will agree with me that it should be made public. If young people would preserve it, it might be of great value to them some time in the future.

And I would have been in utter ignorance of the author if he had not proclaimed it from the house tops.

But really, Mr. Editor, it goes to show just the kind of people who make up the wet crowd, and it also shows us how desperate their cause is. Very truly yours,

P. N. CHASE.

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, August 1.—Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Walker and son Remson of Pocomtio Hills, N. Y., are spending some time with friends in this village.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Walker and son Remson, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Conner, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Barley and son Cornelius, Mrs. U. Barringer and son Everett, Mrs. Garton Keator, Mrs. D. Rhinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Snyder, Miss A. M. Hotelling, and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Markle enjoyed an outing on Thursday afternoon and although a heavy shower came up in the late afternoon, a very enjoyable time was had by all and no one received a wetting. Lunch was taken by the party and through the kindness of the Rev. French of Hurley the party was given the use of the church sheds and tables and to say the least, full justice was done to the good things that were provided to satisfy the inner man. Owing to the shower it was necessary that some of the ladies be carried across the wet piece of ground between the sheds, but fortunately no one was dropped during the operation, and the party returned home at nine, well satisfied with their outing.

The barn of J. M. Schaefer was struck by lightning on Thursday afternoon and burned. We extend our sympathy to neighbor Schaefer.

Do not forget the ice cream and barrel post sale to be held on the lawn of the Reformed Church on Thursday evening, August 4th, by the G. C. A. and N. P. U., Sunday school classes.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

By ALFRED STEPHEN BRYAN

For Summer Tuxedo Wear: Black Jacket And White Trousers—Forked-End Tuxedo Tie—White Waistcoats With Informal Evening Dress—A "Country Squire" Straw

New York, July 30

SINCE Bluebeard, the bogey, it has been the way of humans that if you forbid something you at once make it attractive to some people. There are always men who fairly tingle to transgress the established rules of correct dress, simply because the breach is more inviting than the observance. This is particularly true of evening dress and of midmost summer. To be sure, when the night is sultry and all that sort of thing, conventional evening clothes seem a goodish bit of a burden. Nevertheless, one cannot well go in for cavern comfort. Wiser heads than ours instituted evening dress to maintain dignity and uniformity in men's looks and to prevent that hodge-podge which is inevitable, if we all "gang our air gait". Still, being correctly turned out of a summer evening for say, a dance, does not at all necessitate being a martyr, if you know what to wear and where to wear it. Thin black worsted is no heavier than any woolen cloth worn in the daytime. Evening waistcoats are now cut without backs, consisting of merely a narrow band of cloth below the collar and above the waistline. Indeed, the waistcoat, with the dinner (Tuxedo) jacket, may be omitted altogether and a narrow black silk sash may be worn, thus hiding the line where trousers and shirt come together.

Shawl Lapel; Link Button

Whilst pairing off the black dinner (Tuxedo) jacket with white serge or flannel trousers, as portrayed in the accompanying sketch, is not to be recommended for all occasions, such a combination is to be met at country and seaside dance and about vacation resorts generally. Collegians and the legions who follow them go in for this sort of thing. It may not be strictly correct, but how can one be correctly strict, when one perspires like a harvest-hand? The jacket shown has satin-faced shawl lapels, raised sleeve-heads, semi-vertical side pockets and a slanting breast pocket. A front link button is the only anchorage. Unlike daytime jackets, this one is well-waisted, rather short and worn fastened. The trousers are roomy at hip and knee and cut without bottom turn-ups. The collar is the wing and the black bow-knot, snug of knot and spreading of ends, is worn over, not under, the collar-tabs.

Some time ago it was a fashion, or to be precise, a fad among youngsters to affect the turned-down Tuxedo collar with the tie-ends pushed out of sight beneath the collar-band on each side. This practice has lapsed, because either it was not becoming, or it was becoming too widely used to be acceptable to those who would almost rather be dead, than not be different from the generality of us. The heir-apparent to this fad is illustrated above. The tie, which has split or forked ends, is drawn up right-and-tight against the top of the collar, thus achieving an easy-breezy look, which is not half-bad, if not wholly good.

Tradition Be Hanged

It may come as a bit of a shock to the stickler for the hard-and-fast conventions, endeared by custom and hallowed by tradition, that as many men, if not more, wear the white waistcoat today with the dinner (Tuxedo) jacket, as the black waistcoat. This change has come about gradually and almost imperceptibly, until it is now established among well-turned-out men in the more sophisticated centres. A white waistcoat of such a type is pictured here. It is worn with the black bow-knot tie, the wing collar and the two-button shirt, having a limp, semi-starched bosom. Be good enough to observe the new narrow waistline of this 4-button garment, the buttons set close together at the bottom, the broad, deep shawl lapels and the cut away scyes (armholes).

At the top of the column is reproduced a straw hat woven, Panama shape, of banana fibre, a braid which is not expensive, yet looks spruce and is astonishingly light and cool for midsummer. The creased crown, broad brim and very narrow ribbon lend to this quite an air of the ruddy "master of broad acres" surveying his calves—that is, in the clover or the barn, not in his stockings.

FAREWELL SERMON BY DR. WILLIAMS

The congregation at St. John's Episcopal Church on Sunday were greatly surprised when the rector, Dr. Leighton Williams, announced before the sermon that it would be his last Sunday to preach at St. John's Church. Some time ago the vestry of the church had decided to keep the church open for morning service during the month of August, with the exception of the last Sunday, and later they confirmed this action so that public announcement of the same was made.

Dr. Williams stated that within the week the vestry had decided, in view of many phases of the situation, to change their decision in the matter and that the church would, therefore, be closed during August, a decision which he greatly regretted. It had been his intention to be at St. John's for services two of the three Sundays in August, but under the circumstances Sunday's services would be his last.

Dr. Williams expressed himself as having spent three delightful years in the service of St. John's, years in which there had been joy and the deepest interest in the work. He then gave a brief recital of what had been accomplished, not only materially but in the growth of the spiritual interest of the church.

While he would not officiate at the church again, Dr. Williams stated that for the greater part of the time he would be in Kingston during the month of August, and being still the rector of the church would count it a privilege to be of any service to the people of the parish. If by any chance during that time he might be needed and not reached at the rectory, he could be reached by telephoning to his address in Marlborough.

Said Dr. Williams: "I came to Kingston, on the request of the bishop, hurriedly and quietly, and it seems that I am leaving in like manner, but with sincere prayers for the good, the best, for St. John's Church and parish."

At the evening service Dr. Williams, in closing his sermon, wished the hope that a new man and womanhood, a new order of life—should come to the people of St. John's Church through the transfiguring power and influence of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

THE PRIZE WRITE-UP.

Essay That Won $5 Prize Offered by Herbert Carl.

In connection with the opening of his new millinery store Herbert Carl offered prizes for the best name and the best write-up of the store. An advertisement in another column explains the prize awards as made. The prize write-up was by Miss Lillian House of Esopus and is as follows:

There is a new millinery shop in Kingston, on Wall street at the north corner of North Front street. It is an answer to the need and demand of an appreciative public, Mr. Carl, who is responsible for this new store, has earned the approval of Kingston and Ulster county women by his many years of service to them, and they by their appreciation and their trade have helped him to add to Kingston's splendid stores this finest of all. The new store, too, is an answer to the great army of Kingston and Ulster county women who have asked Mr. Carl to provide a store and stock which would best reflect his skill and his experience in serving their millinery requirements.

Here architect, craftsmen, illuminating engineers and decorators have combined their skill to the proportion that in fineness of appointment there can be no better store for the creation and display of millinery. With modern construction and equipment, with two immense floors, each vying with the other for beauty of decoration, each freely-roofed with sunlight on three sides, and each speciously wide and stretching from street to street, the new millinery store offers unparalleled opportunities for the display of the dainty creations which blossom out of the designing rooms of the store.

The prism of fashion has scattered rays of inspiration into every nook and corner of the shop—nobby headgear for ladies, misses and children, superb styles for walking, motoring or dress wear all add to the beauty of this grand new home of millinery in Kingston.

Each day new arrivals come to the racks and cases, which fact add to the grandeur and makes this newest store an unusually interesting place. All who know Mr. Carl wish him success. All who have seen this grand new store mark it as an indication of the progress of Kingston, but the true success of the store is surely coming from the people who know millinery styles and millinery values and who will make the new store one of Kingston's busiest places from the hour of opening.

Towns in Ancient Days.

Henry VII was a special devotee of tennis, and had a court built for himself at Windsor, where Henry VIII it was who built the famous court at Hampton court, where it may be seen to this day. Tennis was indeed one of the most popular of sports in the reigns of English and French kings. Kings of England and kings of France vied with one another in their devotion to tennis, the courts of both countries followed the royal lead. The football game is particularly popular in the reign of Henry VIII.

Portugal's Story

View of Lisbon Harbor.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Portugal, one of the least known and least written about countries of Europe, owes this fact in part at least to its language. In spite of the claim made by some Portuguese that their speech is closer to the pure Latin than that of any of the other Romance peoples, students find that many Gothic, Arabic, and even Berber elements have strikingly altered the Latin foundation, making the language unusually difficult for those accustomed to the commoner European tongues.

But Portuguese is predominantly a Romance language, and Roman customs and practices have been just as tenacious in Portugal as the Roman tongue. Agriculture has hardly changed at all since the days when, under the protection of Roman legions, settlers came from Italy to the charming valleys of Portugal and introduced their methods of tilling the soil. The addition of maize to the crops grown in perhaps the one significant change since those days. Oxen are still used by the farmers as in old days, and they drag not a modern implement of tillage, but the old primitive Roman plow consisting of crooked stick shod with iron and having a single handle. Grapes are trained upon trees as the Romans trained them, and wine is made in the peculiar way in which it was made on the Sabine farms of old Italy before the beginning of the Christian era.

Not Much Like Spain.
What is now the republic, but was for centuries the kingdom of Portugal, covers the greater part of the old province of Lusitania, one of the rich but hardly won units of the Roman empire. Because of general lack of knowledge in regard to Portugal, there has been a tendency to look on the country as a sort of poor imitation of Spain. Geographically, there is little in common between these two countries which together cover the Iberian peninsula. Much of Spain is a dry, barren tableland; but Portugal, sloping westward to the Atlantic from the east, is well watered, and many of its hills are covered with luxuriant forest growth.

The Romans recognized Lusitania to be fertile and desirable, and colonized it eagerly after the natives were subdued. After the fall of the Roman empire, Portugal was overrun by the Visigoths from the north and later still by the Moors from the south. The results of the mingling of the blood of these two peoples with that of the inhabitants whom they found in Portugal is evident in the Portuguese of today.

The Tagus river, at the south of which is the beautiful capital and metropolis of the country, Lisbon, forms both an ethnic and economic dividing line. It is the region to the north of the Tagus, comprising about three-fifths of the area of the country, are the more typical Portuguese. They are the Celtic, Gothic and Latin mixture with little or none of the Moorish or African strain. This northern region is a country of small farms largely cultivated by the proprietors and their families. The diffusion of the land among many independent owners has created a sturdy peasantry which has been the backbone of Portuguese nationality. The people are intensely patriotic and have ever been ready to fight against foreign domination.

Famous for Its Wine.
Much of Portugal is hilly, and the slope forms of the region north of the Tagus consist of a series of terraces. Near the northern boundary of the country in the valley of the Douro river and its tributaries is the most famous wine country of Portugal. It is estimated that in favorable years more than 20 gallons of wine are produced annually in Portugal for each man, woman and child in the country. Port and Madeira are the best known of the vintages. They are shipped through Oporto in great quantities, going chiefly to Great Britain and Brazil, but in less quantities to many other markets. Nearly two gallons of olive oil per inhabitant are produced each year. Portugal's cork forests are one of the chief sources of wealth for the country. From them comes nearly one-half of the cork produced in the world. The United States imports from Portugal about three-fourths of the cork which it uses.

South of the Tagus river the long occupation of the country by the Moors is evident not only through the architecture, but also because of the appearance of the people. Almost pure Berber types are met in many parts of the district.

Its Rise as a Kingdom.

There was really no Portugal during Roman, Germanic and Moorish domination. Portugal may be considered to have begun to emerge for the first time in 1095 when the Spanish crown, having conquered a small part of the northern portion of the present Portugal, made it an hereditary countyship. The rise of Portugal from this small beginning to an important kingdom and then an empire constitutes perhaps the most spectacular development of a nation to be found in modern history. The son of the first count, Alfonso Henriquez, made his country independent of Spain and himself its king. He then began what was practically a crusade against the Moors to the south, and with the assistance of Christian knights from other countries of Europe, succeeded in driving the infidels from Lisbon in 1147. He and his successors continued the fight, and by about the hundredth anniversary of the fall of Lisbon the entire area of the present Portugal had been freed of Moorish domination.

The country continued to grow in importance, wealth and power. Prince Henry the Navigator became the patron of navigation early in the fifteenth century, and under his encouragement Portugal's great page of discovery and colonization began to be written. The Portuguese were the first of the Europeans to have the necessary vision to make an ordered search for the hidden places of the earth; and their sailors were the first to establish contact between Europe and a large part of the then unknown world, both east and west.

But if the rise of Portugal was rapid, its fall from great power and wealth was equally swift. Its own power was severely depleted to take care of its extensive possessions and its ever broader sphere of influence. Even then colonial affairs were managed rather poorly and there came the inevitable reaction. Weak kings at home with unscrupulous favorites combined to undermine Portugal's rapidly built overseas empire; and the competition of other nations which went about the building of empires more methodically was no unimportant factor in the displacement of Portugal from the foremost position in world affairs which she had won so quickly and with such seeming ease.

Even though there are many of its former possessions, Portugal still controls more than 40,000 square miles of colonial dependencies, chiefly in Africa. The possession of this extensive territory makes Portugal the fourth colonial power of the world, at Russia be disregarded.

Oh! You See My Must!
Ole! Ole! Ole! I'm not quite my self today.
Miss Kidder—Allow me to congratulate you.

COBBLER AS TEACHER GIVES AID TO BOYS

Co-operation His Scheme of Life and Better Men for City His Great Ambition.

His scheme of life is co-operation. His ambition, which has flared for more than three-score years, is to inculcate in boys, particularly boys of the poorer city districts, the logic of doing right for right's sake.

Upon first glance at Jacob Kurtz, in his black frock coat which buttons up high to a Roman collar, and his broad, black soft hat, one might take him for a clergyman.

But he isn't. He is a cobbler. And he spends his days and part of his nights at Olivet Institute, Chicago, teaching the boys of that vicinity how to mend worn-out shoes.

"I have an enrollment of 100 boys," explains Mr. Kurtz with his kindly, sincere smile, which makes one think of Grayson's "Adventure in Contentment." "But of course it isn't possible to give each of the 100 my personal attention, so I take five boys each hour."

"We have class every day from four to five and every evening from seven to nine, and we mend five pairs of shoes each hour."

Cobbling shoes is not all the boys learn at these classes.

Here are some of the don'ts and musts handed down during the class hour:

"Don't ask your brother or sister to do your work."

"Don't get up late in the morning."

"Don't forget pennies make dollars."

"Don't forget that children who honor their teachers in day school and church—for teachers are teachers—will obtain a good name."

"You must build your own character."

"You must do right to be right."

"You must gather your own store of knowledge."

Mr. Kurtz makes it a point to visit the home of each boy in his class. Part of his advice to parents is to reason with their children.

"A boy should know the reason why he should not steal; he should know the reason why he should not lie; the reason why he must go to school; the reason why a good name is to be chosen rather than great riches," he explains.

Sunday Mr. Kurtz, accompanied by boys of his class, is going forth to lecture on the street corners.

The object of the lectures is to increase the membership in his classes and decrease the interest of the boys in the neighborhood gangs.

DOE DOES SOME STUNTS

Visits Rhode Island Town and Lands in Jail.

A doe about the size of a Newfoundland dog performed a series of exciting stunts after it had been caught in a traffic jam on the Globe bridge in Woonsocket, R. I.

The deer appeared suddenly in South Main street and headed for the business section, but, after she had held the right of way in that thoroughfare for some time, she leaped over the railing of the bridge, landed on the roof of the Fall Yarn mills, crashed through a skylight and fell 19 feet into a dye vat partly filled with water.

Before the half dozen men in the room could act the doe swam to the edge of the vat, clambered out, leaped through a window and fell 16 feet to the rocks on the bed of the Blackstone river.

She crawled to the bank, where persons who had seen her go over the bridge caught her. She was taken to the police station in an automobile, locked in a box stall and later taken to the country by a deputy game warden and released.

CHURCH ON WHEELS

One Being Built for Trips in Rural Parts of the Country.

A church on wheels, said to be the first of the kind in America, is being built by the Episcopal Diocese of Kentucky to visit isolated families in the western end of the state, according to the Right Rev. Charles E. Woodcock, bishop of the diocese.

The church van is being constructed at Fulton, Ky., Bishop Woodcock said. It will be used by the Rev. Dr. John R. Robinson, mission worker and former pastor of Fulton.

The truck will accommodate about ten persons. It will be equipped with an organ, beds, cooking utensils and other necessities. Services will be conducted in the covered van when desirable.

Vans for church purposes are used in England, Bishop Woodcock said. This is the first one to be constructed in this country, he said.

For the first time in more than thirty years President Harding mounted a horse during his week-end visit to the Edison-Ford-Firestone camp in the Blue Ridge Mountains, near Pocktonville, Md., and took a jaunt through the countryside with other members of the camping party. The party is here shown fording a stream. The President is in the center of the group.

The American Legion served notice on President Harding that its campaign for adjusted compensation for former service men "cannot be delayed" and urged the president to put his administration in the way of the movement. The Legion's message was delivered by Gilbert E. Bennett, chairman of the national legislative committee of the organization. Mr. Bennett said: "By failing to pass the measure, congress will have demonstrated a just demand of the nation's soldiers. The photograph shows Gilbert Bennett."

Sergeant Alvin York, America's greatest hero, who single handedly captured 132 Germans, faces the loss of his farm near Fall Mall, Tenn., which was partly paid for by popular subscription of $11,235, because of his inability to meet the mortgage. He would have had no difficulty in making up the mortgage due this Fall but for the drop in produce prices and in corn. In addition to his wife, Sergeant York now has a little Alvin to take care of. His farm is now bonded, and he trusts in the Lord he will see it through now as well as he did through the War, says York.

FAREWELL SERMON
BY DR. WILLIAMS

The congregation at St. John's Episcopal Church on Sunday were greatly surprised when the rector, the Rev. Dr. Leighton Williams, announced before the sermon that it would be his last Sunday to preach at St. John's Church. Some time ago the vestry of the church had decided to keep the church open for morning service during the month of August, with the exception of the last Sunday, and later they confirmed this action so that public announcement of the same was made.

Dr. Williams stated that within the week the vestry had decided, in view of many phases of the situation, to change their decision in the matter and that the church would, therefore, be closed during August, a decision which he greatly regretted. It had been his intention to be at St. John's for services two of the three Sundays in August, but under the circumstances Sunday's services would be his last.

Dr. Williams expressed himself as having spent three delightful years in the service of St. John's, years in which there had been joy and the deepest interest in the work. He then gave a brief recital of what had been accomplished, not only materially but in the growth of the spiritual interest of the church.

While he would not officiate at the church again, Dr. Williams stated that for the greater part of the time he would be in Kingston during the month of August, and being still the rector of the church would count it a privilege to be of any service to the people of the parish. If by any chance during that time he might be needed and not reached at the rectory, he could be reached by telephoning to his address in Marlborough.

Said Dr. Williams: "I came to Kingston, on the request of the bishop, hurriedly and quietly, and it seems that I am leaving in like manner, but with sincere prayers for the good, the best, for St. John's Church and parish."

At the evening service Dr. Williams, in closing his sermon, voiced the hope that a new man and woman, a new order of life should come to the people of St. John's Church through the transfiguring power and influence of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

THE PRIZE WRITE-UP.

Essay That Won $5 Prize Offered by Herbert Carl.

In connection with the opening of his new millinery store Herbert Carl offered prizes for the best name and the best write-up of the store. An advertisement in another column explains the prize awards as made. The prize write-up was by Miss Lillian House of Esopus and is as follows:

There is a new millinery shop in Kingston, on Wall street at the north corner of North Front street. It is an answer to the need and demand of an appreciative public. Mr. Carl, who is responsible for this new store, has earned the approval of Kingston and Ulster county women by his many years of service to them, and they by their appreciation and their trade have helped him to add to Kingston's splendid stores this finest of all. The new store, too, is an answer to the great army of Kingston and Ulster county women who have asked Mr. Carl to provide a store and stock which would best reflect his skill and his experience in serving their millinery requirements. Here architect, craftsmen, illuminating engineers and decorators have combined their skill to the proportion that in fineness of appointment there can be no better store for the creation and display of millinery. With modern construction and equipment, with two immense floors, each vying with the other for beauty of decoration, each freely flooded with sunlight on three sides, and each spacious wide and stretching from street to street, the new millinery store offers unparalleled opportunities for the display of the dainty creations which blossom out of the designing rooms of the store.

The prism of fashion has scattered rays of inspiration into every nook and corner of the shop—nobby headgear for ladies, misses and children, superb styles for walking, motoring or dress wear all add to the beauty of this grand new home of millinery in Kingston.

Each day new arrivals come to the racks and cases, which add to the grandeur and makes this newest store an unusually interesting place.

All who know Mr. Carl wish him success. All who have seen this grand new store mark it as an indication of the progress of Kingston but the true success of the store is surely coming from the people who know millinery styles and millinery values and who will make the new store one of Kingston's busiest places from the hour of opening.

Tennis in Ancient Days.

Henry VII was a special devotee of tennis, and had a court built for himself at Windsor, whilst Henry VIII it was who built the famous court at Hampton court, where it may be seen to this day. Tennis was indeed even a game of kings and princes. Kings of England and kings of France vied with one another in their devotion to it, whilst the courts of both countries followed the royal lead. The faithful Peeps is peculiarly faithful in his reticence to tennis.

Portugal's Story

View of Lisbon Harbor.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Portugal, one of the least known and least written about countries of Europe, owes this fact in part at least, to its language. In spite of the claim made by some Portuguese that their speech is closer to the pure Latin than that of any of the other Romance peoples, students find that many Gothic, Arabic, and even Berber elements have strikingly altered the Latin foundation, making the language unusually difficult for those accustomed to the commoner European tongues.

But Portuguese is predominantly a Romance language, and Roman customs and practices have been just as tenacious in Portugal as the Roman tongue. Agriculture has hardly changed at all since the days when, under the protection of Roman legions, settlers came from Italy to the charming valleys of Portugal and introduced their methods of tilling the soil. The addition of maize to the crops grown is perhaps the one significant change since those days. Oxen are still used by the farmers as in old days, and they drag, not a modern implement of tillage, but the old primitive Roman plow consisting of crooked stick shod with iron and having a single handle. Grapes are trained upon trees as the Romans trained them, and wine is made in the peculiar way in which it was made on the Sabine farms of old Italy before the beginning of the Christian era.

Not Much Like Spain. What is new the republic but was for centuries the kingdom of Portugal, covers the greater part of the old province of Lusitania, one of the rich but hardly won units of the Roman empire. Because of general lack of knowledge in regard to Portugal, there has been a tendency to look on the country as a sort of poor imitation of Spain. Geographically, there is little in common between these two countries which together cover the Iberian peninsula. Much of Spain is a dry, barren tableland; but Portugal, sloping westward to the Atlantic from the east, is well watered, and many of its hills are covered with luxuriant forest growth.

The Romans recognized Lusitania to be fertile and desirable, and colonized it eagerly after the natives were subjugated. After the fall of the Roman empire, Portugal was overrun by the Visigoths from the north and later still by the Moors from the south. The results of the mingling of the blood of these two peoples with that of the inhabitants whom they found in Portugal is evident in the Portuguese of today.

The Tagus river, at the south of which is the beautiful capital and metropolis of the country, Lisbon, forms both an ethnic and economic dividing line. In the region to the north of the Tagus, comprising about three-fifths of the area of the country, are the Celtic, Gothic and Latin mixture with little or none of the Moorish or African strain. This northern region is a country of small farms largely cultivated by the proprietors and their families. The diffusion of the land among many independent owners has created a sturdy peasantry which has been the backbone of Portuguese nationality. The people are intensely patriotic and have ever been ready to fight against foreign domination.

Famous for Its Wines. Much of Portugal is hilly, and the little farms of the region north of the Tagus consist of a series of terraces. Near the northern boundary of the country in the valley of the Duero river and its tributaries is the most famous wine country of Portugal. It is estimated that in favorable years more than 20 gallons of wine are produced annually in Portugal for each man, woman and child in the country. Port and Madeira are the best known of the vintages. They are shipped through Oporto in great quantities, going chiefly to Great Britain and Brazil, but in less quantities to many other markets. Nearly two gallons of olive oil per inhabitant are produced each year. Portugal's cork forests are one of the chief sources of wealth for the country. From them comes nearly one-half of the cork produced in the world. The United States imports from Portugal about three-fourths of the cork which it uses.

South of the Tagus river the long occupation of the country by the Moors is evident not only through the architecture, but also because of the appearance of the people. Almost pure Berber types are met in many parts of the district.

Its Rise as a Kingdom.

There was really no Portugal during Roman, Germanic and Moorish domination. Portugal may be considered to have begun to emerge for the first time in 1095 when the Spanish crown, having conquered a small part of the northern portion of the present Portugal, made it an hereditary county. The rise of Portugal from this small beginning to an important kingdom and then an empire constitutes perhaps the most spectacular development of a nation to be found in modern history. The son of the first count, Alfonso Henriques, made his country independent of Spain and himself its king. He then began what was practically a crusade against the Moors to the south, and with the assistance of Christian knights from other countries of Europe, succeeded in driving the infidels from Lisbon in 1147. He and his successors continued the fight, and by about the hundredth anniversary of the fall of Lisbon the entire area of the present Portugal had been freed of Moorish domination.

The country continued to grow in importance, wealth and power. Prince Henry the Navigator became the patron of navigation early in the fifteenth century, and under his encouragement Portugal's great page of discovery and colonization began to be written. The Portuguese were the first of the Europeans to have the necessary vision to make an ordered search for the hidden places of the earth; and their sailors were the first to establish contact between Europe and a large part of the then unknown world, both east and west.

But if the rise of Portugal was rapid, its fall from great power and wealth was equally swift. Its main power was severely dispirited to take care of its extensive possessions and its even broader spheres of influence. Even then colonial affairs were managed rather poorly and there came the inevitable reaction. Weak kings at home with splendid profits combined to undermine Portugal's rapidly built overseas empire; and the competition of other nations which went about the building of empires more methodically was no unimportant factor in the displacing of Portugal from the foremost position in world affairs which she had won so quickly and with such seeming ease.

Even though shorn of many of its former possessions, Portugal still controls more than 800,000 square miles of colonial dependencies, chiefly in Africa. The possession of this extensive territory makes Portugal the fourth colonial power of the world, if Russia be disregarded.

Oh! You Saucy Miss! Chelle Chapie—I'm not quite myself today.

COBBLER AS TEACHER
GIVES AID TO BOYS

Co-operation His Scheme of Life and Better Men for City His Great Ambition.

His scheme of life is co-operation. His ambition, which has flared for more than three-score years, is to inculcate in boys, particularly boys of the poorer city districts, the logic of doing right for right's sake.

Upon first glance at Jacob Kurtz, in his black frock coat which buttons up high to a Roman collar, and his broad, black soft hat, one might take him for a clergyman.

But he isn't. He is a cobbler. And he spends his days and part of his nights at Oliver Institute, Chicago, teaching the boys of that vicinity how to mend worn-out shoes.

"I have an enrollment of 100 boys," explains Mr. Kurtz with his kindly, sincere smile, which makes one think of Grayson's "Adventure in Contentment." "But of course it isn't possible to give each of the 100 my personal attention, so I take five boys each hour."

"We have class every day from four to five and every evening from seven to nine, and we mend five pairs of shoes each hour."

Cobbling shoes is not all the boys learn at these classes. Here are some of the don'ts and musts handed down during the class hour:

"Don't ask your brother or sister to do your work."

"Don't get up late in the morning."

"Don't forget pennies make dollars."

"Don't forget that children who honor their teachers in day school and church—for preachers are teachers—will obtain a good name."

"You must build your own character."

"You must do right to be right."

"You must gather your own store of knowledge."

Mr. Kurtz makes it a point to visit the home of each boy in his class. Part of his advice to parents is to reason with their children.

"A boy should know the reason why he should not steal; he should know the reason why he should not lie; the reason why he must go to school; the reason why a good name is to be chosen rather than great riches," he explains.

Sunday Mr. Kurtz, accompanied by boys of his class, is going forth to lecture on the street corners.

The object of the lectures is to increase the membership in his classes and decrease the interest of the boys in the neighborhood gangs.

O. L. EASTMAN RETIRED TODAY

From Active Business Career and Will Take a Long Rest—Brief Sketch of the Life of One of Kingston's Well Known Residents.

Oscar L. Eastman, bookkeeper for the Cornell Steamboat Company, has been retired from active service on pension and will take a long rest. He has been active for many years in the business life of the city, and also in Masonic circles. He has been a resident of this city since 1871.

A brief sketch of his long and active life will prove of interest to his host of friends and is as follows:

Mr. Eastman was born April 1, 1851, at Ira, Cayuga county, N. Y. His father, the Rev. Orren Eastman, was a Baptist clergyman, and after leaving his residence at Truth, Lewis Co., moved to Herkimer county, Plymouth, Chenango county, Springfield, Otsego county, Ontario and Walworth, Wayne county, all in New York state. Oscar was educated in the common schools of the places where his parents resided, and later took a course at the "Eastman National Business College" at Poughkeepsie. During his residence at Springfield he learned telegraphy and was an operator when the news came of President Lincoln's being shot in 1865. On February 21, 1871, he came to Rondout, Ulster county, since incorporated into the city of Kingston, where he has since resided. The next day he accepted a position in Winter's book store and telegraph office, his employer being superintendent of the telegraph line. His employer was also postmaster of the then Rondout post office, and he was at once sworn in as clerk in the post office and every day divided his time between the two places. He continued until May 2, 1877, when he resigned from the bookstore and became deputy postmaster under a new postmaster, Andrew N. Barnes. This position he retained until December 1, 1880, when he resigned and became bookkeeper in the general office of the Wallkill Valley Railroad Company. He served as such until February 14, 1882, when he entered the employ of Samuel D. Coykendall, where he has been ever since. He at once became auditor and bookkeeper of the Stony Clove & Catskill Mountain Railroad Company, and served as such until the company was sold to the Ulster & Delaware Railroad Company. At the same time, Feb. 14, 1882, he became bookkeeper for the Kingston City Railroad Company, and on October 1, 1884, he became auditor, which position he held until January 16, 1888, when Mr. Coykendall, who owned all of the stock, sold it to the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company, when the management changed. On April 10, 1885, he became secretary and treasurer of the Rhinebeck & Kingston Ferry Company, and held that position until May 1, 1913, when he became bookkeeper, which position he has held ever since. On January 18, 1901, he became bookkeeper of the Cornell Steamboat Company, which position he has also held ever since. On September 23, 1874, he married Miss Kate Preston, who was born in Rondout Feb. 13, 1854, and their married life has been unusually happy. They have three children, Fred W. Eastman has a wife and one child, and resides in Brooklyn. Mrs. Elizabeth Lyon has no children and resides at Webster Station, Madison county, and Dr. Frank L. Eastman of this city has a wife and three children. For fourteen years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Eastman resided in Tabor Row, now Corlies Row, on Spring street, and then moved to the property at 55 West Pleasant street, where they have since resided.

Mr. Eastman united with the Methodist church in Ontario, N. Y., in 1866 and transferred by letter to the Warren Street Baptist Church of this city, where he has been in office almost continuously during this period, and is now one of the board of trustees. He was initiated into Masonry on Aug. 12, 1877, and is a member of all of the bodies in the American Rite. He is a past master, past assistant grand lecturer, past district deputy grand master and past grand representative in symbolic Masonry; past high priest, past assistant grand lecturer and past grand master first well in regular Masonry; past commander of Rondout Command No. 52, Knights Templar, and past grand representative. He is a thirty-second degree Mason in the Scottish Rite and a member of the Temple of the New York Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. He has been a member of the International Order of Good Templars since August 26, 1887, transferring his card through various lodges, and is a member of Antioch Lodge, No. 86, at Poughkeepsie.

On March 2, 1888, Mr. and Mrs. Eastman organized Kingston Chapter No. 125, Order of the Eastern Star, the honoring the first meeting, and served two years, and also one year as district deputy grand master and he becoming the first patron.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story
Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Jim reached for the parcel and handed it to the woman, remarking, "Sixty-three cents."

"Eh? What? Pay sixty-three cents for that? It's me own property sent to me by me brother Jake in New York. What have I got to pay sixty-three cents on it for?"

"There's sixty-three cents express charges due."

"Sure and those were paid long before it left New York."

"I've no record of it here," Jim turned the bundle over, and then reached for the book close at hand. "See for yourself. There is no record of any money having been paid on it."

"Sure it's paid," persisted the old woman. "You don't know your business. You'd better learn it."

"I'm trying to, but this is my first day in an express office."

"You won't last long here," snapped the woman, pulling out a pocket-book from an undershirt, while Jim looked modestly away.

"No, I don't expect to," he remarked, thinking of the clause in his uncle's will which forbade his remaining at any job longer than two days. "No, I don't expect to."

"Well, the cheek of that!" She slammed the sixty-three cents vehemently on the counter. "He's got sense enough to cover the whole of Texas."

Jim shrugged his shoulders, his eyes softening as the little white woman entered. She had been in the express office once before that morning, and when she had asked if a package had come for Miss Sarah Meadows he had read tragedy in her eyes.

"I'm sorry, Miss Meadows, your bundle hasn't come in. It won't be in tonight."

She nodded her head pathetically, and went out. Jim piled up the packages that had just come in, stamped them, checked up the paid and the unpaid, and then, far back behind several dusty packages, he found a compact bundle addressed to Miss Sarah Meadows, Express Company, City.

Instantly the woman's face appeared before him. This, her package, had been here for how long? How many trips had she made only to be disappointed through their carelessness? He had told her that it would not be in that day. Ahead of her lay a night of anxiety and suspense. Somehow it seemed as though he could not wait for the morning. He must send the package to her at once. But he did not know where she lived or how to find her.

In his own ignorant way he hunted through the neighborhood for Miss Meadows, and at last was directed to a cheap boarding house on 7th avenue. "Miss Meadows?" he queried, and then in relieved tones, "Oh, Miss Meadows," as she stepped lightly down the corridor. "Here is your package at last."

The little white lady held out her hand, away and fell, an inert mass at his feet.

"You see," she said later, after she had recovered. "I didn't want that package at all. When you told me it hadn't come, I could have cried for joy. And then to have it arrive so unexpectedly, was too much for me."

"But why didn't you want it?"

"It's a novel. One I'd written. No, one would take it. This time the publisher said he'd returned it, but it had been lost so long I had hoped to get the insurance on it. Today was the day I had set to put in my claim—if it hadn't turned up."

Tears fell freely. Jim squeezed her soft hand in sympathy, and resolved that if he won his fortune he would send that novel, good or bad, would be printed.

What's a regulation or two when a baby eyelid flickers flirtatiously? At Ellis Island they thought they'd keep little Ninette Lai and her mother, Mrs. Y. C. Lai, out under the Chinese Exclusion act, though the mother is an Englishwoman. But Ninette winked one of those "You wouldn't do that to lift me, would you?" winks, and the regulations went by the boards. Later it was learned that the father, already ashore, is an inventor and scientist, and as such exempted from the ban.

O. L. EASTMAN RETIRED TODAY

From Active Business Career and Will Take a Long Rest—Brief Sketch of the Life of One of Kingston's Well Known Residents.

Oscar L. Eastman, bookkeeper for the Cornell Steamboat Company, has been retired from active service on pension and will take a long rest. He has been active for many years in the business life of the city, and also in Masonic circles. He has been a resident of this city since 1871.

A brief sketch of his long and active life will prove of interest to his host of friends and is as follows:

Mr. Eastman was born April 1, 1851, at Ira, Cayuga county, N. Y. His father, the Rev. Orresta Eastman, was a Baptist clergyman, and after leaving Ira resided successively at Truth, Lewis Co., Litchfield, Herkimer, Putnam, Chenango, Otsego, Springfield, Oswego, Ontario and Walworth, Wayne county, all in New York state. Oscar was educated in the common schools of the places where his parents resided, and later took a course at the "Eastman National Business College" at Poughkeepsie. During his residence at Springfield he learned telegraphy and was an operator when the news came of President Lincoln's being shot in 1865. On February 21, 1871, he came to Rondout, Ulster county, since incorporated into the city of Kingston, where he has since resided. The next day he accepted a position in Winter's book store and telegraph office, his employer being superintendent of the telegraph line. His employer was also postmaster of the then Rondout post office, and he was at once sworn in as clerk in the post office and every day divided his time between the two places. He continued until May 9, 1877, when he resigned from the bookstore and became deputy postmaster under a new postmaster, Andrew N. Barnes. This position he retained until December 1, 1880, when he resigned and became bookkeeper in the general office of the Walkill Valley Railroad Company. He served as such until February 14, 1882, when he entered the employ of Samuel D. Coykendall, where he has been ever since. He at once became auditor and bookkeeper of the Stony Clove & Catskill Mountain Railroad Company, and served as such until the company was sold to the Ulster & Delaware Railroad Company. At the same time, Feb. 14, 1882, he became bookkeeper for the Kingston City Railroad Company, and on October 1, 1884, he became auditor, which position he held until January 16, 1901, when Mr. Coykendall, who owned all of the stock, sold it to the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company, when the management changed. On April 16, 1895, he became secretary and treasurer of the Rhinebeck & Kingston Ferry Company, and that position until May 1, 1917, when he became bookkeeper, which position he has held ever since. On January 19, 1901, he became bookkeeper of the Cornell Steamboat Company, which position he has also held ever since. On September 23, 1874, he married Miss Kate Preston, who was born in Rondout Feb. 15, 1854, and their married life has been unusually happy. They have three children, Fred H. Eastman has a wife and one child, and resides in Brooklyn, Mrs. Elizabeth Eastman has no children and resides at Webster Station, Madison county, and Dr. Frank L. Eastman of this city has a wife and three children. For fourteen years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Eastman resided in "Gable Row" near Cortis Row, on Section street and then purchased the property at 55 West Pleasant street, where they have since resided.

Mr. Eastman united with the Methodist church in Ontario, N. Y., in 1880, and transferred by letter to the Morris Street Baptist Church of this city, where he has been in office almost continuously during this period, and is now one of the board of trustees. He was initiated into Masonry on Aug. 19, 1872, and is a member of all of the lodges in the American Rite. He is a past master, past assistant grand lecturer, past district deputy grand master and past grand representative in symbolic Masonry, past high priest, past assistant grand lecturer and past grand master first wife in "ancient" masonry, past commander of Rondout Commandery No. 52, Knights Templar, and past grand representative. He is a thirty-second degree Mason in the Scottish Rite and a member of the Temple of Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the New York Society of Founders and Patriots of America. He has been a member of the International Order of Good Templars since August 20, 1867, transferring by card through various lodges, and is a member of Abolishing Lodge No. 50, at Poughkeepsie.

On March 2, 1898, Mr. and Mrs. Eastman organized Kingston Chapter No. 155, Order of the Eastern Star, she becoming the first matron, and served two years, and also one year as district deputy grand matron and he becoming the first patron.

serving fifteen years, and three years as assistant grand lecturer. They are both life members of the grand chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, in the state of New York.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story
Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Jim reached for the parcel and handed it to the woman, remarking, "Sixty-three cents."

"Eh? What? Pay sixty-three cents for that? It's me own property sent to me by me brother Jake in New York. What have I got to pay sixty-three cents on it for?"

"There's sixty-three cents express charges due."

"Sure and those were paid long before it left New York."

"I've no record of it here," Jim turned the bundle over, and then reached for the book close at hand. "See for yourself. There is no record of any money having been paid on it."

"Sure it's paid," persisted the old woman. "You don't know your business. You'd better learn it."

"I'm trying to, but this is my first day in an express office."

"You won't last long here," snapped the woman, pulling out a pocket-book from an undershirt, while Jim looked modestly away.

"No, I don't expect to," he remarked, thinking of the clause in his uncle's will which forbade his remaining at any job longer than two days. "No, I don't expect to."

"Well, the check of that!" She slammed the sixty-three cents vehemently on the counter. "He's got sense enough to cover the whole of Texas."

Jim shrugged his shoulders, his eyes softening as the little white woman entered. She had been in the express office once before that morning, and when she had asked if a package had come for Miss Sarah Meadows he had read tragedy in her eyes.

"I'm sorry, Miss Meadows, your bundle hasn't come in. It won't be in tonight."

She nodded her head pathetically, and went out. Jim piled up the packages that had just come in, stamped them, checked up the paid and the unpaid, and then, far back behind several dusty packages, he found a compact bundle addressed to Miss Sarah Meadows, Express Company, City.

Instantly the woman's face appeared before him. This, her package, had been here for how long? How many trips had she made only to be disappointed through their carelessness. He had told her that it would not be in that day. Ahead of her lay a night of anxiety and suspense. Somehow it seemed as though he could not wait for the morning. He must send the package to her at once. But he did not know where she lived or how to find her.

In his own ignorant way he hunted through the neighborhood for Miss Meadows, and at last was directed to a cheap boarding house on 7th avenue. "Miss Meadows?" he entered, and then in relieved tones, "Oh, Miss Meadows," as she stepped lightly down the corridor. "Here is your package at last."

The little white lady held out her hand, swayed and fell, an inert mass at his feet.

"You see," she said later, after she had recovered, "I didn't want that package at all. When you told me it hadn't come, I could have cried for joy. And then to have it arrive so unexpectedly, was too much for me."

"But why didn't you want it?"

"It's a novel. One I'd written. No one would take it. This time the publisher said he'd returned it, but it had been lost so long I had hoped to get the insurance on it. Today was the day I had set to put in my claim, if it hadn't turned up."

Tears fell freely. Jim squeezed her soft hand in sympathy and resolved that if he won his fortune he would see that the novel, good or bad, would be printed.

OFFICIAL WORTH HAVING.

County Scales of Weights and Measures Who Protects the Public.

Delaware county has a county sealer of weights and measures who not only believes that the public is entitled to protection against unscrupulous dealers but who puts his belief in practice. The Delaware county official makes regular tours of inspection and when he reached Margaretville and heard complaints that a local butcher was giving short weight, he made a practical test. Selecting a small boy in the street, the Delaware county sealer sent the boy to make several purchases which on being checked up were found in three items to be short weight on each, pound from one-half an ounce to three ounces. Three separate charges were made against the dealer, who was fined $5 for each offense. The county sealer notified the Bureau of Weights and Measures which sent an inspector to Margaretville and he made purchases which also were short weight. The matter is now pending before the attorney general.

ROSENDALE. 1.—The Sunshine Club of the Baptist church will hold a fair and supper on Tuesday evening, August 2, at the church. Howard Stearns is papering and redecorating the Baptist parsonage at present.

ROBINSON'S MIND BADLY SHATTERED

An effort probably will be made today to have Emory P. Robinson, shell shocked veteran of the World War, returned to the state hospital at Poughkeepsie, where he has been an inmate for the last nine months. Instead of holding him in Albany to await trial on a charge of grand larceny for the alleged theft of five passenger touring cars owned by George T. Stearns, of 54 Lancaster street, last Friday morning.

Robinson and William Gage, a negro, who were taken to Albany from the Ulster county jail Saturday night by Detective William J. Bannion, where they had been arrested with the car in their possession, were arraigned in police court Sunday morning. Robinson had passed the night in Pavilion F, Albany hospital, while Gage was locked up in the second precinct station. Both entered pleas of not guilty and Police Justice John J. Brady committed them to jail to await further hearing. The magistrate said he would have liked to comply with a request from Robinson's mother and a representative of the Red Cross, that he be recommitted to Pavilion F, but said that it was not within his province to do so. The only place he could commit him, he said, was the jail or second precinct station.

Robinson was in Albany on a visit to his parents last week and his mother returned to Poughkeepsie with him on Tuesday. When he escaped from the hospital, he is not known. He came to Kingston, called on Eugene B. Carey, secretary of Kingston Post, American Legion, who paid for his lodging at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night and for his breakfast and on Wednesday got him a free ride to Albany, where it is alleged he stole an automobile, and came back to this city and was arrested.

Robinson since his return from overseas, where he was shell shocked and gassed while serving in the 104th Machine Gun battalion, Twenty-seventh division, has suffered from lapses of memory and his condition became such that it was necessary to have him committed.

BLACKS RIVAL'S EYE WITH HOMER

A Thrilling Tale of Love and Baseball in Mountain League—Roodboy's Marvelous Magnetic Charm Won Mountain Championship.

"It just puts me in mind of the old days," remarked the Old Timer as he watched the Colonial A. C. bat out an 8 to 3 victory over the Albany Dumas at the Athletic Field the other day.

"How is that?" asked the other baseball fan.

"It was long before your time that the Mountain League was in all its glory," continued the Old Timer. "and reading in the paper the other night about Ralph Roodboy losing all his hatching hens when they were drowned from sitting on ball stones, puts me in mind of the time when Ralph won not only the mountain championship by his home run clout in the ninth frame, but also his sweetheart, who is now his wife."

"Baseball in the Mountain League was real fighting baseball from the opening inning until the last man was called out, and it took a lot of brains to win games in those days, and Roodboy was one of the brainiest players in the league. He was all the time inventing something and when he was not doing that he was rushing Nellie Towers, and she was some baby doll."

Then there was Twin Gormley, who was also a ball player in the league and an admirer of Nellie, and between Roodboy and Gormley it appeared to be an even shake. Roodboy played on the Galluppers while Gormley was catcher on the Busters.

"Well, as I was saying, the game went about even between the two for each was playing on a team that had tied the other for first place in the league and one did not seem to be able to get ahead of the other in the affections of Nellie. In fact, Nellie was stumped for she liked Roodboy equally as well as she did Gormley, and finally she came to the point where she had to make up her mind, and she told them she would become engaged to the fellow who closed the season on the winning team."

"Well, in some way it became noised about and I tell you what there was considerable interest displayed in that baseball league with even money bet on the Galluppers and the Busters. Finally the season drew to a close with the two teams tied for first place and the deciding game to be played on the Galluppers' home lot."

"The morning the game was to be played Roodboy awoke bright and early. He had spent a restless night and had dreamed that his hated rival had won both the ball game and Nellie. It was then that Ralph's inventive genius came to his rescue, and he decided that all was fair in love and baseball, and spent the rest of the morning mixing up some of his magnetic ointment."

"With a full bottle of it he repaired to the ball field and away out in center field he searched the high board fence over carefully and in the center of the field and close to the top of the fence he found what he was looking for—a knot hole. Taking some of his magnetic ointment he painted around the knot hole, and as the ointment was white in color it could not be seen on the fence."

"Now we will see," quoth Roodboy as he strode from the field.

"A few minutes later Gormley appeared on the scene and he was walking on crutches. It seems that the night before he was hurt in a runaway accident and so would be unable to play in the deciding game. Helpless in one way he had made up his mind to show up his deadly rival and strange to say he also hunted the center field over looking for a knot hole. He found the same knot hole that his rival had painted, but he never noticed the ointment around the knot hole."

"Just the hole I was looking for," chuckled Gormley hoarsely to himself, and he pulled a small mirror out of his pocket and from the outside of the fence where he could not be seen he attempted to reflect the rays of the sun through the knot hole and met with success and by perfecting for half an hour he was able to see streak of light as far as home plate."

His plan in brief was simple. He was counting on disgracing his rival Roodboy by casting the sun's rays into Roodboy's eyes as he stood at bat causing him to swing wildly at the ball when pitched to him. It was a dastardly scheme but Gormley muttered, "All is fair in baseball and love."

Well to make a long story short the game went along to the fatal ninth with Roodboy unable to score a single hit due to the fact that as he struck at the ball a ray of light blinded him. He was unable to tell from whence it came or what caused it. At the ninth inning drew towards a close it found the bases occupied by three Galluppers and Roodboy at the bat. Now was his opportunity to wipe out his disgraceful baptism of the afternoon.

He picked up his favorite bat and when no one was looking rubbed some of his marvelous magnetic ointment on the bat. The idea was that when he struck the baseball some of the ointment would stick to it and as the ball flew through the air it would be attracted to the ointment around the knot hole in the center field fence and head for it passing through the knot hole."

Gormley did not know of his rival's scheme and decided to let the Busters' pitcher put two strikes over on Roodboy before using the magic to cause Roodboy to biff the third strike. Roodboy, of course, did not know that Gormley's plan had been the cause of his poor batting stroke during the game, and that at that moment Gormley had his eye fixed to the knot hole on the other side of the center field fence."

As I said Roodboy did not know that what the Busters' pitcher threw over the first ball Roodboy biff with a crack and it sailed at terrific speed toward the knot hole far out in the center field fence while the Galluppers on base gallupped home with the winning run."

Before Gormley could remove his

OFFICIAL WORTH HAVING.

County Sealer of Weights and Measures Who Protects the Public.

Delaware county has a county sealer of weights and measures who not only believes that the public is entitled to protection against unscrupulous dealers but who puts his belief in practice. The Delaware county official makes regular tours of inspections and when he reached Margaretville and heard complaints that a local butcher was giving short weight, he made a practical test. Selecting a small boy in the street, the Delaware county sealer sent the boy to make several purchases which on being checked up were found in three items to be short weight on each pound from one-half an ounce to three ounces. Three separate charges were made against the dealer, who was fined $5 for each offense. The county sealer notified the Bureau of Weights and Measures which sent an inspector to Margaretville and he made purchases which also were short weight. The matter is now pending before the attorney general.

He picked up his favorite bat and when no one was looking rubbed some of his marvellous magnetic ointment on the bat. The idea was that when he struck the baseball some of the ointment would stick to it and as the ball flew through the air it would be attracted to the ointment around the knot hole in the center field fence and head for the pitcher's box.

Gormley did not know of his rival's plans and decided to let the Busters' pitcher put two strikes over on Roodboy before using the mirror to cause Roodboy to miff the third strike. Roodboy, of course, did not know that Gormley's hated rival had been the cause of his poor batting streak during the game, and that at that moment Gormley had his eye glued to the knot hole on the other side of the center field fence.

ARE THESE TWO CHICKEN THIEVES

Saturday afternoon Sergeant Halsey arrested Steve Wesolowski of First Avenue and Peter Bonofski of Rondout street, two young men, on a charge of being chicken thieves. This morning Mrs. Andrew Killian of Delaware avenue swore out an information charging the youths with stealing chickens from her chicken yard. The boys retained Attorney A. J. Cook to represent them and the hearing was adjourned until later.

For some time past chicken thieves have been operating in North Rondout and among those who have been missing chickens are the Messrs. Killian, Ludella, Throns and Zell. The police believe that with the arrest of the two young men they have caught the ones guilty of helping themselves from the North Rondout hen roost.

The Bar Clambake.
Judge Joseph M. Fowler, president of the Ulster County Bar Association, has appointed a committee to inquire into and determine if a clambake and outing is desired by the members of the Bar Association. Henry Klein, Walter Sillier, G. Augustus Shufeldt, Robert G. Groves and Dubois J. Gillette have been named on the committee. Owing to the fact that the clambake, lobster and oysters apparently disagree with a number of the members of the association the committee is unanimously in favor of holding the outing in August. Just where the outing will be held has not been decided upon but suitable grounds will be secured in order that the present baseball game may be played.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Aug. 1.—The stock market opened firmer this morning. Mexican Petroleum was unchanged at 105. Studebaker rose 1/4 to 78. U. S. Steel advanced 1/4 to 74 1/2. Sinclair Oil rose 1/4 to 20 1/2. Atlantic Gulf moved up 1/4 to 21 1/2. Baldwin Locomotive was 1/4 points higher at 73. Coca-Cola advanced 1/4 to 34 1/2. General Asphalt moved up 1/4 to 52 1/2. Allied Chemical gained 1/4 to 37 1/2. General Electric moved up 1/4 to 118 1/2 and Royal Dutch was unchanged at 52.

Soon after the opening the demands for stocks broadened to a considerable extent and vigorous advances were made in a number of issues, the railroad stocks again becoming prominent and the buying of stocks were in some cases an impressive character. Northern Pacific became a strong feature, moving up 1 point to 79 1/2 and support attention was developed to Pennsylvania which showed pronounced strength, more than recovering its dividend of 1/2 which it sold ex at the opening.

Steel industrialists all moved to higher levels, the greatest gain being made in Midvale Steel which rose 1 1/2 to 25. U. S. Steel was in vigorous demand, advancing 1/4 to 75 1/2 and Baldwin rose 1/4 to 79 1/2. General Asphalt was the strongest of the petroleum group, moving up 1 1/2 to 54 1/2. Mexican Petroleum yielded 1/4 to 104 1/2 and then rallied to above 105. Royal Dutch was exceptionally heavy, ranging from 52 1/2 to 50 1/2. Studebaker was a strong feature, advancing from 77 1/2 to 78 1/2. General Electric which had been offered down a week ago and which was in supply at intervals was a strong feature making a gain of 1/4 to 120.

The market maintained a generally strong tone in the afternoon but price movements were irregular, buying being concentrated in various issues at frequent intervals. Mexican Petroleum moved up to 104 1/2 to 107 1/2 and General Asphalt advanced over 2 points to 55. Pan-American Petroleum made a gain of over 2 points moving up to above 50. Railroad stocks after advancing in the forenoon became heavy and lost a good part of their gains.

The market closed irregular today; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

A Clean Cool Scalp

Parian Sage Stops Itching, Keeps the Scalp Cool—Prevents Dandruff.

Almost everybody nowadays knows that Parian sage is guaranteed to remove every trace of dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp, or the cost, small as it is, will be refunded.

But you should know more about this marvelous hair saver and beautifier. You ought to know that it immediately despoils all odors that are bound to come from the excretions of the scalp, and in five minutes after an application, no matter how hot the weather, your head will feel cool and comfortable.

"Everyone should have a bottle of Parian sage handy because it is such a pleasant and refreshing hair treatment. Ladies use it because they know it is daintily perfumed, not sticky or greasy and surely does make the hair beautiful, silky and abundant. Here's what a New York woman writes: 'I have used Parian sage two weeks only, yet in that time find my hair has wonderfully increased in beauty, thickness and luxuriance, but what surprised me most was the disappearance of all dandruff.'"

A large bottle of Parian sage can be obtained from McEldridge Drug Store or at any good drug or toilet counter—it's not expensive.

ARE THESE TWO CHICKEN THIEVES

Saturday afternoon Sergeant Hanley arrested Steve Wesolowski of First avenue and Peter Bonofski of Rondout street, two young men, on a charge of being chicken thieves. This morning Mrs. Andrew Killian of Delaware avenue swore out an information charging the youths with stealing chickens from her chicken yard. The boys retained Attorney A. J. Cook to represent them and the hearing was adjourned until later.

For some time past chicken thieves have been operating in North Rondout and among those who have been missing chickens are the Messrs. Killian, Ludella, Thoms and Zell. The police believe that with the arrest of the two young men they have caught the ones guilty of helping themselves from the North Rondout hen roost.

The Bar Clambake.

Judge Joseph M. Fowler, president of the Ulster County Bar Association, has appointed a committee to inquire into and determine if a clambake and outing is desired by the members of the Bar Association. Henry Klein, Walter Miller, Augustus Shufeldt, Robert G. Groves and DuBois J. Gillette have been named on the committee. Owing to the fact that clams, lobsters, and oysters apparently disagree with a number of the members of the association, the committee is unanimously in favor of holding the outing in August. Just where the outing will be held has not been decided upon but suitable grounds will be secured in order that the annual baseball game may be played.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 1.—The stock market opened firmer this morning. Mexican Petroleum was unchanged at 105. Studebaker rose 1/4 to 78. U. S. Steel advanced 1/4 to 74 1/2. Sinclair Oil rose 1/4 to 20 1/4. Atlantic Gulf moved up 1/4 to 21 1/4. Baldwin Locomotive was 1/4 points higher at 79. Coca-Cola advanced 1/2 to 34 1/2. General Asphalt moved up 1/4 to 52 1/2. Allied Chemical gained 1/4 to 37 1/4. General Electric moved up 1/4 to 118 1/2 and Royal Dutch was unchanged at 52.

Soon after the opening the demands for stocks broadened to a considerable extent and vigorous advances were made in a number of issues, the railroad stocks again becoming prominent and the buying of stocks were in some cases of an impressive character. Northern Pacific became a strong feature, moving up 1 point to 79 1/4 and support attention was developed to Pennsylvania which showed pronounced strength, more than recovering its dividend of 1/2 which it sold ex at the opening. Steel industrials all moved to higher levels, the greatest gain being in Midvale Steel, which rose 1 1/2 to 25. U. S. Steel was in vigorous demand, advancing 1/4 to 75 1/2 and Baldwin rose 1/4 to 79 1/2. General Asphalt was the strongest of the petroleum group, moving up 1 1/2 to 54 1/2. Mexican Petroleum yielded 1/4 to 104 1/4 and then rallied to above 105. Royal Dutch was exceptionally heavy, ranging from 52 1/2 to 53 1/2. Studebaker was a strong feature, advancing from 77 1/2 to 78 1/2. General Electric which had been offered down a week ago and which was in supply at intervals was a strong feature making a gain of 1/4 to 120.

The market maintained a generally strong tone in the afternoon but price movements were irregular, buying being concentrated in various issues at frequent intervals. Mexican Petroleum moved up from 104 1/4 to 107 1/2, and General Asphalt advanced over 2 points to 55. Pan-American Petroleum made a gain of over 2 points moving up to above 50. Railroad stocks after advancing in the forenoon became heavy and lost a good part of their gains.

The market closed irregular today, government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

Although in years she is fifty-seven, in spirits she is only eighteen. At least so says Mrs. Jennie Harrison, who is shown in this picture ready for a dive into the water. She has just won a ten-mile swimming race from the women of the Panama Canal Zone, at Balboa. She also holds a record for endurance swimming, having been in the water for five hours and thirty-seven minutes at one stretch. Besides holding these records, Mrs. Harrison has chalked up a twenty-five-foot dive to her credit.

A Clean Cool Scalp

Parian Sage Stops Itching, Keeps the Scalp Cool—Prevents Dandruff.

Almost everybody nowadays knows that Parian sage is guaranteed to remove every trace of dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp, or the cost, small as it is, will be refunded. But you should know more about this marvelous hair saver and beautifier. You ought to know that it immediately despoils all odors that are bound to come from the excretions of the scalp, and in five minutes after an application, no matter how hot the weather, your head will feel cool and comfortable. Everyone should have a bottle of Parian sage handy because it is such a pleasant and exhilarating hair treatment. Ladies use it because they know it is instantly performed, not sticky or greasy and surely does make the hair beautiful, silky and abundant. Here's what a New York woman writes: "I have used Parian sage two weeks only, yet in that time my hair has wonderfully increased in beauty, thickness and luxuriance, but what surprised me most was the disappearance of all dandruff." A large bottle of Parian sage can be obtained from McBride's Drug Stores or at any good drug or toilet counter—it is not expensive.

SEVERAL HURT IN ACCIDENTS HERE

Two Men Injured When Auto And Motorcycle Collided—Auto Struck Woman On Abiel Street—Murphy's Car Skidded.

Undertaken James M. Murphy while driving his auto up Broadway Saturday afternoon at the head of Albany avenue turned out for a milk wagon and lost control of his car which skidded and ran into the window in the office of Charles Gray. The front of the car was damaged. Mr. Murphy was somewhat shaken up but otherwise unhurt.

Sunday afternoon about 3:50 o'clock Harry Bassett of Albany struck Mrs. C. W. Hicks of Connelly as he was rounding the curve in the road at Fischer's Hotel on Abiel street. Mr. Bassett reported the accident to police headquarters. He said that there were two other cars going in the opposite direction at the time and one of the cars started to pass the other at the time he was approaching them. He said he applied his brakes and that he passed Mrs. Hicks with the front of his car but the rear end skidded and struck her. Mrs. Hicks was not badly injured.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday evening a motorcycle and automobile came together at Broadway and Foxhall avenue. John Clearwater of 52 Down street, who was driving the motorcycle, and John Kazar of 108 Gage street, who was riding in the sidecar, were injured and taken to the Kingston City Hospital, where their injuries were attended to. Mr. Clearwater was later taken to his home. He sustained a fractured leg. Kazar escaped with minor injuries.
